STRANGLES

Or Distemper in stallions, brood mares, colts and all others is most destructive. The germ causing the disease must be removed from the body of the animal. To prevent the the same must be done do both—cure the sick and prevent those "exposed having the disease. All druggists. SPOHN MEDICAL CO., Chemists, Goshen, Ind., U.S.A.

SPOHN'S COMPOUND

HER HUMBLE LOVER

"I must have dropped it," he mur-mured, and thrust the offending hand behind him out of sight.

With a quick gesture Signa took out her own handkerchief, and, stooping down, drew it through the long grass drenched with dew; then put her hand upon his arm timidly, and drew his hand toward her.

"No, no!" he said, huskily, quivering at her touch, but she smiled up at him with a little air of determination, and tenderly wiped away the red stain; then wound the hundkerchief round his hand.

"Thank you!" he murmured, almost audibly. "You have spoiled your etty handkerchief." Then he stopinaudibly. ped abruptly, and looked away from

"And may I not do even that, when you have done so much for me?" she said, reproachfully. "Do you think I do not know how much you have done, and bow much more you would have done? You would have risked your life—" Her voice broke, but Her voice broke, but with it. "You would she struggled with it. "You would have leapt from that hideous tower to save me, and I may not do so small a thing as this!" She sighed, then she laughed softly. "Let me go

He turned and looked at her, and her eyes fell before the passionate fire in his.

"No," he said; "stay-stay one mo "No," he said; "stay—stay one moment. Signa—" He paused, and as he leant over the side of the soat his hand went out toward her with an imploring, caressing gesture. "Signa, will you listen to me? I have something to say to you." She did not speak, but she looked up at him, a swift, fearful, passionate glance. "I a swift, fearful, passionate glance. "I feel that it should not be said now— just after I have been of some slight service to you, just now that you may think I am entitled to your gratitude—but, ah! Signa, the words have been on my lips these weeks past. I have said them to myself a thousand times. Can you not guess what they times. Can you not guess what they are? 'I love her—I love her!' Signa, heavenly music the words ring in her ears. Mechanically her lips open, and inaudibly she echoes them, as if they were something infinitely precious-too precious to be real.

"I love you!" he murmured, bending over her, his hand still outheld. his face pale with the passion of love and anxiet "From the first day I saw you—there by the sea—my heart went out to you. When! saw your sweet face that day for the first time, I knew that it was the face of the one woman in the world. I knew that it was the face of the one woman in the world for me, and one woman in the world for me, and from that hour to this my love has if her words had touched a jarring one woman in the world for me, and from that hour to this my love has grown, has so grown that now it has shorted mastered me—Oh, my darling—let me call you so, if only for this once—if an integral world will be seen downton. how truly, how devotedly I love you, you love me even for pity's sake. would love me even for pity's sake. I am I met you. D mot worthy to offer my love to you. I may happennot worthy to offer my love to you.

Her eyes turn toward in a m not worthy to receive anything | Her eyes turn toward in a m not worthy to receive anything | sudden startled expression. speak to you thus of love, am—oh, Heaven, if I could but call back the past—one so stained and besmirched by the world that my love is not worthy the acceptance of any woman, least of ail of yours, the queen and heart of womanhood, and yet—and yet, see now, Signa, my darling, if—if you can bring yourself to think of me as one whose whole life from this time forth shall be spent in devotion to you in worship of your purity and worthy the acceptance of any woman to you; in worship of your purity and loveliness, then—ah, then—" He stopped, and his tace grew leadly pale.

"Speak to me," he said, at last, as she remained silent.

For a moment he leans over her, as if too dazed to understand the look, then he bends over her, and lays his hand heavily upon her shoulder.

"Signa!" With a faint cry she leans toward him, and her head drops upon his arm.

Specchless, he draws her to him with a passionate gesture, and strains her to his breast.

"Oh, my darling, my darling!" he nurmurs, hoarsely. "Is it true? Is murmurs, hoarsely. "Is it true? I it 'yes'? Do you, can you love me? stain; then wound the handkerchief round his hand.

Pale and tremulous he stood beside her, so near that his coat sleeve round his hand.

Pale and tremulous he stood beside her, so near that his coat sleeve round hand tremulous he stood beside her hand creeps slowly up to his face.

With a registrative heatlers. With a passionate geeture he takes it and presses it to his lips, and draws it round his neck, and so, with her ft, silky hair against his face, lies lost to the world—to the past, the present, to life itself—in the one moment of cestatic bliss which we poor mortals enjoy on earth. mortals enjoy on earth.

Above them the placid moon sails on flooding them with its soft light as if with a benediction. A bird, startled with a benediction. with a benediction. A bird, startled from its rest, flies heavenward with a faint chirp; the sound of the murmuring tide floats toward them; all muring tide floats toward them; an nature seems to sympathize and throb in harmony with this one moment of human passion.

Then at last Signa raises her head and looks up at him with eyes heavy with happiness, and her hand sildes from its embrace as a crimson flush of maluenty shame suffices ner face.

"Am I dreaming." she murmurs.

He kisses her half-parted lips.

"No, darling, you are awake, and this is real. Let me kiss you again, and you shall see."

"No, no!" she pants, drawing her face from him. "I know now that it is real. But why—ah, why do you love me? You said that you loved me, did me? You said that you loved me, did you not?" with a sharp spasm of incredulity.

"I love you I love you!" he whispers in her ear. "Why? My darling there is nothing to wonder at in it. Any man might well love you for your beauty; but that—though I prize it dearly, and am half foolish with pride of it—is as nothing with me! Why? Why, Signa, even that poor fool who has just correct that poor fool who las just gone—even he loved you.'

She shudders "No! Don't speak of him."

"An why not 1?" he murmurs.

She looks beyond him with softly gleaming eyes, tremulous with an ecstasy of doubt and belief, of wonder and delight. and delight.

dream," she says, softly. "That you seen, and so many beautiful and gracious women, should think of loving me!" and she laughs falteringly.

chord,
"Signa," he says, slowly, and with an intense earnestness. "In all my life, varied and eventful as it has been, I have never known what love was until

I met you. Do not doubt that whatever Her eyes turn toward him with a

His lips twitch, and his hand closes on her.

"Let come what may in the future, never forget that, as there is a heaven above us, I loved you with all my heart and soul. I swear to that, signa!"

what may I said, always remember that you loved me this night, this one glorious, perfect night in my life. Ah, if it would but last!" and her glance goes up to the moon with mild wistful-she remained silent. "I—I can bear it, though the world may be the bitterest in all the world for me. I will take my wasted life from your path. I will—ah, Signa, speak to me, though it be only to tell me that I have loved in vain."

Trembling, but with a keen, ecstatic joy, she raised her eyes and looked at him.

gess up to the moon with mild wistfulness.

"The night passes, but the day comes!" he says, and his voice is lighter, as it he had cast the shadow of world in vain."

"The day comes, the long day which you and I, Signa, have to be happy in; that day when we shall be together, looked at him.

her ears, and she lays her head upon his breast, and presses her lips to the enseless coat.

Then she laughs-a low, rippling laugh of excessive happiness—like the falling of water from a cup over-filled, "What will Aunt Podswell say?"

He laughs in harmony; then he shrugs his shoulders.

"Aunt Podswell," he says, "will get upon the wartrail; she will unearth the hatchet and thirst for my scalp; there will be wreth in the Podswell. there will be wrath in the Podswell wigwam when it is known that the beautiful belie of North cell has given herself to the obnoxion factor Warren. The storm of the part of the day will be as nothing to the aboveling tempost which awaits us."

"That storm! How I love to think of it."

"That storm! How I love to think of it," murmure Signa, almost inaudibly. How heppy I was, and how brave and good and kind—no! how bad and wicked you were!"
"As how?" he says, sumoothing the silky hair with a proud, caressing hand, as a miser might nurse and fondle his gold fondle his gold.

"Oh, do you not remember? You would not drink out of the same cup. He laughe, but there is a thrill of passion in the laugh.

"No, I dared not; it seemed sacrilege, profanation, and when at last you made me, I though that my lips touch where yours had been, and all my strength was needed to keep me from clasping you in my arms, and—"
"What would Archie have said?" she whispers, her face all aglow. "Bu about my aunt, I don't understand— "No?" he says, with a grave smile "No?" he says, with a grave smile.

"Do you think she will welcome me with open arms as her—what is it—nepnew-in-law? Foor, unknown, an adventurer, a half-suspected operasinger! I am a pretty fellow to carry off the prize!"

Signa is silent for a moment, then

Signa is silent for a moment, then

she looks up at him.
"What does it matter?" she says. simply. "What does it matter; sne says, simply. "What does it matter; though all the world stood with upraised hands and shouted 'No!' I should not care. I think—yes, I think I should be all the more glad to come," and her head droops. "But-but are you so very poor?

"At this moment I am richer than the man who owns the biggest mine in Peru! Did I not hold in my arms the most precious thing in all the

"Ah! so poor and worthless a tri-e!" she falters. "But tell me." "Poor?" he says, and he looks down fle! "Poor?" he says, and he looks down at her with a faint smile. "It is an elastic term. Answer me, Signa, would you be content to live the life of a poor man's wife? To depend upon him with any and begin for delivery his right arm and brain for daily bread?"

"If it were your right arm and If it were your right arm and brain," she answers, proudly, "and if I could not live then; I could starve and still be happy if I knew that you were not starving too!"

"There shail be no starving," he says. "There will be enough for our modest wants, Signa." She sighs and a vague shade crosses her brow. "What's amiss?" he asks, with halfsmiling tenderness.

"No-thing. Yes, I am disappointed. I was hoping-hoping that you were very poor."

"Quite the mendicant?" "Yes, quite the mendicant! Because then I should seem quite rich, and it would be so sweet to feel that I had something to give you besides myself." "I did not know I was making love to an heiress," he says, still with the half-smile.

She laughs. "An heiress, Hector! I have a miscrable hundred a year, or thereabouts, it is miserable now that you are not quite poor, but if you had been—"

and she sighs again "A hunared a year or so," he says, thoughtfully. "Signa, don't be disappointed before there is any occasion. A hundred a year is very welcome to an adventurer-

"Really!" with vivid delight.
"Really and truly," he says. "Y re quite an heiress. A hundred year! I was thinking of a little cot

"Oh, yes!" a villa and—perhaps a pony-chaise." She nestles closer to him.

she nestles croser to him.
"I am so grad! Don't think meanly of me, but I am so grad. I wish—ah! how I wish it were thousands!"
"Never mind," he says, cheerfully and magnananously, "a hundred is something. I am a lucky man. My treasure of pure gold is gilt outside clso!" Then his light tone of raillery changes suddenly to one of deep ten. changes suddenly to one of deep ter derness, and he murmurs, "My child! My child!"
"Why do you say that?" she asks, looking up at him.

"Why? Because you are like sweet, innocent child, who wears her sake. daw to peck at, but to gather into his own dark bosom-so!-and cherish for evermore! There is silence for a moment, then he starts, and lays his hand upon her shoulder.

hat day when we shall be together, be in mind and body and soul!"

Almost solemnly his voice rings in the week with dew. Great Heaven! how thoughtless of me. We must go."

Mew Series

REMEMBER! The ointment you put on your child's skin gets into the system just as surely as food the child eats. Don't let impure fats and mineral coloring matter (such as many of the cheap ointments contain) get into your child's blood! Zam-Buk is purely herbal. No poisonous coloring. Use it always. 50c. Box at All Druggists and Stores. ONLY

AM-BUK

FOR CHILDRENS SORES

"Must we? Ah!"

"Yes; even now you may catch old. Let me brush the dew from your dress.' And he goes down on his knees to

And he goes down on his knees to do so, and as he looks up at her, she stoops and kisses him.

"Shall I tell you—shall I make a shameful confession?" she whispers, her face and neck a burning red.

He nods, holding her hand, his eyes drinking in the light down powing drinking in the light down pouring from hers.

"Shall I? I feel as if I must! Well, then, when you knelt and wiped the wet from my dress the other day at St. Clare, I felt tempted—ah! Tiercely tempted—to stoop and kiss you as kiss you now. Ah, my love! my love!

"Gracious Heaven!" "Bless m soul!" "Signa!" "What is the matter? "Mr. Warren!" my

These and similar ejaculations, ut tered in a sort of chorus by Mr. and Mrs. Podswell, greet the pair as they enter the Rectory drawing room; tor Warren rather pale, and still bearing about him the evidences of his climb up the tower; Signa dew-drenched and pale to the lips, but with a soft-gleaming light in her violet eyes.

Mary, standing at the back, staring with all her eyes, guesses at the truth in a moment; but the worthy pair of guardians are thicker-skulled, and still uiter ejaculations open-mouthed.

"Signa, what does it mean?" at last gasps Aunt Podswell, gasps Aunt Podswell, rising and clutching her shawl round her with an irritable excitement and wrath.

Signa takes off ner hat and sinks softly into a chair, with her eyes bent on the ground, not ashamedly, but on the ground, with ashances, with a heavy, dreamy consciousness. "Well!" demands Mrs. Podswell, with a heavy, dreamy consciousners.

"Well!" demands Mrs. Podswell, snappishly, "can't you speak? Are you aware of the time? Where is Lady Blyte? Why have you left the Park? And what—what—" "does he mean by being in your company," she would like to add; but the dark eyes, fixed so calmly on her, are too much for her.
"Let me explain!" says Hector War.

"Let me explain!" says Hector War-ren, coming to the table, and putting his hat down with the easy, graceful self-possession which poor Sir Frederic so madly hates. "Miss Grenville left the Park-"

left the Park—"
"I suppose she can speak for herself?" breaks in Aunt Podswell, glaring at him. "I don't understand. Joseph, why don't you speak?" turning upon the rector, who stands rubbing his chin, and with his eyes like saucers.

"I—ahem!— I was about to do so,
"Beekly. "Signa, my dear!" he says, meekly. "Signa, what does this mean? You—you have upset your aunt exceedingly. Why have you come here so unexpectedly, and at this—anem!"—with a glance at the clock and a solemn shake of the head "at this-er, really undeemly hour"

Signa raises her head, as if with an elfort to recall herself from blissful freamland to the unpleasant reality of the situation.

"Miss Grenville is tired," says Hector Warren. "Let me explain. Happening to be in the park, I met with Miss Grenville; and hearing from her that, for reasons which she will no doubt explain to you, she wished to return she is. Don't be alarmed, my dear Mrs. Podswell; nothing serious has hap-pened."

"Nothing serious? But it is serious. Do you mean to tell me that you have persuaded this foolish girl to leave Lady Blyte at a moment's notice, and Lady Siyle at a moment's notice, and without—without informing her lady-ship?" demands Aunt Podswell, fairly meeting the dark eyes in her wrathful indignation.

Hector Warren inclines his head almost impetiently. He does not care, so far as he is concerned, how fierce and long the storm may rage; but he sees the drooping heard beside him, and wishes to get the tempest over for her

"Yes, that is it, exactly. I plead guilty, Mrs. Podswell. I am sorry you guilty, Mrs. Pousweil, I am sorry you should be upset. It is enough to upset you, I admit. But Signa—"
"Signa!" echoes Mrs. Podswell shrilly; and she throws up her head.

"By what right do you speak of my niece by her Christian name, Mr. niece by her Christian name, Mr.-er-Warren?"
"By the right she has bestowed up### on me in promising to be my wife," he says quietly. "Your - You -" gasps Mrs. Pods

and well; while the rector flushes and shuffles as if the floor had suddenly become red-hot—"My wife," repeats Hector Warren, mildly. "I am sorry to spring this news upon you in this way, and I hope to lay my preposal before you in proper form to-morrow, Mr. Podswell," and he looks at the rector, who gasps like a fish and shakes his head as if it were of no use to appeal to him. "Until then—"

"Excuse me one moment. I cannot become red-hot "Excuse me one moment. I cannot "Excuse me one moment. I cannot permit this absurd—I say absurd—I nonsense to go further!" says Aunt Podswell shrilly. "I would have you remember, Mr. Warren, that this young lady is not unprotected. My husband and I are her guardians, and werable for her welfare."

Heetar Warren incluses his head.

Hector Warren inclines his head.

"And a part of our duty—the greatest part is that we should not allow her to fall into the hands of—of—"

"An adventurer," puts in Hector Warren calmly

Warren, calmly.
"You have said the odious word, not I, sir, but it has been spoken, and let

(To be continued.)

it stand.

ST. VITUS DANCE AFFECTS MANY CHILDREN

The Trouble Can be Cured Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

St. Vitus Dance is much more

St. Vitus Dance is much more common than is generally imagined. The trouble is often mistaken for mere nervousness, or awkwardness. Usually attacks young children, most often between the ages of six and fourteen—though older persons may be affected with it. The most common samutabless of six common sympton is twitching of the muscles of the lace and limbs. As the disease progresses this twitching takes the form of spasms in which the jerking motion may be confined to the head, or all the limes may be affected. The patient is, frequently unable to hold anything in the nands or walk steadily, and in severe cases the speech may be affected. The disease is due to impoverished nerves, owing to the blood being out of condition and can be cured by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which enrich the blood, strengtian the nerves, and in this way restore the sufferer to good health. . . y symptom of nerve trouble in young children should be promptly treated as it is should be promptly treated as it is almost sure to lead to St. Vitus Dance. The following is proof of the power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pilk to cure this trouble. Miss. Hattic Cummings, R. R. No. 3, Peterboro, Ont., says:—'I was attacked with what the doctor said was St. Vitus Dance. Both my hands trembled so as to be practically useless. Then the trouble went to my left side and the trouble went to my left side, and from that to my right leg, and left me in such a condition that I was not able to go out of the house. I took the doctor's medicine without ne without get-Then I tried anting any benefit. Then I tried another remedy with the same poor reto try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and did so, with the result that they fully restored me to health, and I have not had the slightest symptom of the symptom of the strong symptom of the symptom of the symptom of the symptom who is suits. At this stage I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and not had the singhtest sympton or nervous trouble since. I can recom-mend these pills to anyone who is suffering from nervous trouble, and hope they will profit by my experience. You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any drug dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. Brockville, Ont.

PREVENT PNEUMONIA.

Increase Physical Resistance by Husbanding the Strength.

Pneumonia is largely a disease of middle life. Its greatest incidence is luring the activ of adult life. About 80 per cent. of the cases of pneumonia show the presence of types of germs which are oftentimes very virulent, but which depend upon contact for their distribution.

"Carriers" are effective and dangerous in this distribution. Such "carriers" in the room of recovered patients may retain the virulent pneu-mocci for nearly a month and may during that time be dangerous to those who come in contact with them. those who come in contact with them. The prevention of pneumonia is possible. The first thing to do is to keep up the physical resistance—to take care of the health and to avoid abusing it. Both innocently and wilfully we may weaken our resistance to pneumonia. Habitually neglecting to have a needed amount of sleep and persistency in working early and late, and not having enough food to eat, is an innocent way of weakening one's physical resistance.

sical resistance.
Other ways of destroying the resistance consist in deliberately doing what known to undermine the vitality is known to undermine the vitality, such as needlessly exposing eneself to sudden changes of temperature and cold, excessive fatigue, intemperance and excesses. One who habitually uses alcohol has very feeble resistance and is rarely able to escape an attack of pneumonia, if exposed to the infection.

The germs which cause the disease The germs which cause the disease are everywhere. The careless cougher in the crowded street or elsewher disseminates the virulent germs of phalmonia. Recovered patients (carriers) throng in shelps, rallway trains and places of business. They are in contact (near) all classes of people—the weak (with no resistance) and strong (good resistance).

The moisture from the mouths of carriers falls everywhere but lustring the moisture from the mouties of carriers falls everywhere, but luckby the germ cles unless it finds a suitable place to thrive.

Germs will live and infect a person who is weak or debilitated from any

DRS. SOPER & WHITE

SPECIALISTS Piles, Eczema, Asthma, Catarrh Dyspepsia, Epilepsy, Rheumatism, ley, Blood, Nerve and Bladder Di Call or send history for free advice. Medicing arnisled in tablet form. Hours—10 a.m. to 1 p.m. ad 2 to 6 p.m. Sundays—10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Consultation Free DRS. SOPER & WHITE
25 Toronto St., Toronto, Ont.

Please Mention This Paper.

dishes in restaurants should be redishes in restaurants shown be required to be thoroughly washed each time they are used. Carriers, unto timately, cannot disinfect the mouths before eating, but everything used by them can be prevented from giving the infection to others by the free and generous use of boiling water and soap. Do not have pneumonia. Keep well rested up, well fed and refrain from dissipation of every kind. The little things neglected every day weaken the resistance to this disease. Stop when you are tired. Go to bed after a wear-ing day of hard work and given ing day of hard work and give up the contemplated evening at the theatre, opera or the visit to friends. Rest tre, opera or the visit to friends, Rest at such a time is imperative. Not to stop and rest (in middle life) when tired, fretted or fatigued imposes a strain on the nervous system and circulatory system, which deprives these systems of the power to combat the ravages of a disease which holds a nerson hedfast.

person bedfast. Eat three or even four meals when Eat three or even four meals when you are working at top speed day after day. Ten hours of sleep every night and an abundance of food every day gives strength to the heart and nerves, and you will have undreamed of strength and resistance to every disease, and espe 'ally pneumonia.

TRADE BRIEFS.

Coal exports from Sydney, Nova Scotia, to the United States in 1916 amounted to $367,311, which was a decrease in value from the exports of the previous year. Soap manufacturers in Spain are enleavoring to bring about the prohibi tion of the exportation of green sul-phur oil. The Spanish soap industry depends largely on this oil, and there was a small yield in 1916. The United States Covernment sold 1,900 fur seal skins at St. Louis recently for $93,678. A profit of $16,000 was realized. Japan's cement industry has flour-ished in the past few years, the output in 1915 amounting to 2.942,000 barrels. It is asserted that American cement is being all injusted famous and in the company of being eliminated from the market.

Nineteen sixteen was a prosperous year in Newfoundland except fo lumber industry, which showed a decrease. The seal catch was valued at $637,000, as against $34.000 in 1915 A modern biscuit bakery has been built at Hong Kong, China. The machinery was bought in the United States English just bags, which are used in Guatemala for marketing coffee, have doubled in price since the outbreak of hostilities in Europe and are now worth 40 cenis each. Maritime sanitation laws have been passed by the Chilean Government. In the future all ships entering Chilean ports will be inspected.

Explosive manufacturers in the United States used 538.710 bales of bleached cotton fibre in 1916, which was an increase of 294.707 bales over the amount used in 1915 Before the Furopean war 50 per cent, of British East Africa's exports of chillies came to America, but high freight rates have decreased these exports to 15 per cent Exports in 1916 were valued at $82,000, with Egypt as the best customer

Baths Relieve Pain

Sufferers throughout the world are gaining relief from theraunetic experiences by the doctors in the hospitals of the war zone who are continually devising some means to reduce the pain of the wounded soldiers. At a large hospital it was found that quantity of opiate given some of the men who were suffering from severe wounds, seriously retarded their re-covery. At an experiment, several were suspended in tubs through which water at a temperature of 100 degrees Fahrenheit was kept running. One man who had been in such pain from a lacerated thigh that it was feared he would go insane, was laid upon a rubber mattress in a bath. Hi entirely subsided, and more progress in healing was made than in any similar wound upon record.

herviline Ends Keuralgia. Erings elief Instantly

No Remedy Like Old "Nerviline" to Cure Pain or Soreness.

That terrible ache-how you fairly reel with it—that stabbing, burning neuralgia—what misery it causes. Never mind, you don't have to suffer -use Nerviline, it's a sure cure. Not an experiment, because nearly forty years of wonderful success has made a name for Nerviline among the peoa name for Nervillie and a strong children ple of many different nations, "There is nothing speedier to end Neuralgie headache than old-time Nerviline," writes Mr. G. C. Dalgleish, from Evanston. "It is so powerful and pene-Germs will live and infect a person who is weak or debilitated from any cause.

Pneumonia should be treated as an infectious disease which is acquired to the condition of the c

There is a Chevrolet Dealer in your locality anxious to give you a demonstration. See him before you buy your 1917 Motor Car. Write to Oshawa for a new catalogue showing all Chevrolet Models.

$695. 1. o. b. OSHAWA including Electric Lights and Starter CHEVROLET MOTOR COMPANY
OF CANADA. LIMITED
OSHAWA. CANADA.
WESTERN SERVICE AND DISTRIBUTING BRANCH

The best steel, and genuine highest grade materials forged, cast or welded into shape by modern machines of scientific accuracy insure the high efficiency of the CHEVROLET Four-Ninety.

The resiliency of the chassis, the pliancy of the supporting springs and fine upholstery insure comfort Our mammoth production and efficiency methods

REGINA, BASK.