PURPLE PENCE By John Walker Harrington. Copyright, 1901, by J. W. Harringto

Ramchunda Singh first heard of the purple pence as he was pouring yellow powder upon the simmering contents of a chafing dish. He was curry cook in Cherry's restaurant at a time when a new fad had just arrived in New York. Ramchunda Singh was sure that the fad would be short lived, and, being a Hindoo person of ready resources, he sought to find another means of livelihood. Life had not been pleasant since by strange chance Ramchunda Singh had imbibed intoxicants. He had been left stranded in A scholar having broken a pane of New York on the day the steamer on glass in a certain school house, not which he was a tender of wild anithousand miles from Clinton, was mals had departed for the ports of told by the teacher that it should be paid for, says the Clinton New the orient. For several years Ramchunda Singh had come over the sea made by the teacher, who was amuswhenever a consignment of lions and ed and surprised to receive the fol-lowing note from the pupil's father: tigers and elephants had been sent to the South street animal dealers. He tried to get Scalds to employ him, but trade was dull, and Scalds said that broke this pane of glass and you he preferred the Irish to the Hindoos. So it was that Ramchunda Singh, by pulling from—at 7 cents so you needent be thretning to whip educated Hindoo learning of the new

"I HAVE ALSO A TENDER AND SUSCEPTIapplied for the position of curry cook and had obtained it. He resigned on the day Mrs. Sprengle and cousin took

The following morning found him at the house of William Peterson Sprengle, dealer in scrap metal and disgustingly wealthy. Ramchunda Singh had invested some of his hard earned wages in a remarkable suit consisting of a shiny Prince Albert coat, bought secondhand, and a pair of black trousers. On his head was a silk turban. He had sent a note to Mrs. Sprengle explaining that his business was urgent and concerned the welfare of her hus band. "I dine with you tonight," said Ram chunda Singh gravely, "To what am I indebted for the honor?" said Mrs. Sprengle, who had read the etiquette books and the novels of Martha M. Day and knew what was proper under the circumstances. "L overheard you say quite by chance," said Ramchunda Singh, "that you would give a great deal to have your husband give up theosophy, which takes too many of the purple pence and makes him neglect his family and his business."

"You are the curry cook at Cherry's! exclaimed Mrs. Sprengle. "Madam." rejoined Ramchunda Singh, "I am a person of high caste, a highly educated Hindoo. I shall be able to restore your busband to his senses, for I, too, was once a theoso phist." So it came to pass that on that very night Mrs. Sprengle greeted her husband with the remark that she had decided to learn something of theosophy and had engaged as teacher Mr. Ramchunda Singh, late of Delhi and Calcutta, who was an adept.

With every dinner for a week or more the peace of Ramchunda Singh was given unto the house of Sprengle. The lore of the East Indies was at the command of the guest. He talked of Vedas, and the scantily fed soul of William Peterson Sprengle was filled with joy. Ramchunda Singh and the master of the house went together to the meetings of the theosophical society. Mrs. Sprengle noticed with growing apprehension that Ramchunds Singh was dressing in elaborate style and that he had all the spending money which he seemed to require. On of the Sprengles be was a regular vis mitted into the secret. Mrs. Sprengle saw that her older daughter, Agaths was blushing whenever the swar even knew his ring. Her busband was charmed with the ways of that Ramchunda Singh, unmindful of caste, sat at dinner with them, "perhaps you would not mind if I took a little pilgrimage to the Himelayas with our friend?

Mrs. Sprengle started to tell what she thought of it all when a look from the Hindoo dissuaded her. She said that such a journey would no doubt be interesting. Mr. Sprengle retired to get the map of India.

"You scoundrel!" cried Mrs. Sprengle. "How dare you? You promised to cure my husband of his wretched nonseuse, and you make it all the worse. How far is this going?" "To the sum of $10,000," was the re ply. "Unless that amount is forthcoming you will see your husband on his way to India with Ramchunda Singh. I have also a tender and a susceptible heart, and I should dislike for less to relinquish my claims to the affection of one whom I much admire."

Ramchunda Singh placed a fat hand on his chest and rolled his eyes upward.

Four days afterward William Peter son Sprengle came home white with

"Mary," he said, "I am done with this theosophy forever! That scoundrel Ramchunda Singh has fled for parts unknown. Quite by accident he dropped a letter in my office in which he referred to me as the 'old idiot,' upon whose ignorance he was imposing. Never mention his name to me again!"

"I hate to think he was an impostor, William," replied Mrs. Sprengle, "for before he went away I gave him quite a sum of money. However, if you wish, the subject of theosophy will never again be mentioned in this

Over the door of an animal store in Calcutta there is today the sign "Ramchunda Singh," and within sits an affluent Hindoo, smoking his pipe and taking his ill gotten ease.

Getting an Autograph of Davis. A Chicago girl, in looking over a book of autographs of famous people, one day ran across this letter:

Dear Miss X .- Your note requesting auto graph is a model. Please start a school of collectors.

Chicago, Oct. 7, 1897.

This letter immediately interested the girl and she inquired by what method her friend had secured so flattering a reply.

The owner of the letter explained that she had sent the actor a blank sheet of paper with the words, "Your autograph, please," written at the top of the sheet. This she sent with stamped envelope for reply.

"The brevity of my note evidently pleased Mr. Gillette, for no doubt he is bored to death with many foolish notes from hundreds of matinee girls and other autograph fiends like myself,

The rival collector was struck with the originality of the idea, and, thinking to repeat her friend's success in se curing such a fine note, said, "I think I shall try that plan also, and then I, ters to add to my book."

That same afternoon she sent a card with this brief phrase, "Your auto graph, please," to Mr. Richard Harding Davis, and within a few days she received the following dry response written on the same card beneath her short request:

You seem pressed for time.

"Thou Diest on Point of Fox." Fox blades were celebrated all through the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries for their excellent temper and mention of them is frequent in English drama. This is their history: There was a certain Julian del Rel, believed to be a Morisco, who set up a forge at Toledo in the early part of the sixteenth century and became famons for the excellence of his sword plades, which were regarded as the best of Toledo. That city had for many ages previous been renowned for swordmaking, it being supposed that the Moors introduced the art, as they did so many good things, from the Julian del Rei's mark was a little dog, which came to be taken for a fox, and so the "fox blade," or simply "fox" for any good sword. See "Henry V.," act 4, scene 4, "Thou diest on point of fox." The brand came to be imitated in other places, and there are Solingen blades of comparatively modern manufacture which still bear the little dog of Julian del Rei.-Notes and Queries.

A Wagner Find. Autograph letters of Wagner have been discovered in use as fam pot covers. A German journalist found them at the house of two maiden ladies, sisters of a musician long since deceased, who had formerly been in intimate correspondence with the author of "Parsifal." The ladies were exhibiting to him with much pride their cupboards full of jam when the journalist saw some writing on the covers which he recognized as that of Wagner. The superior thickness of the paper, which almost resembles parchment, had supplied the reason for its application to this domestic use.
