Friendships.

If you prove a friend there are friends for you
Who will lighten your upward way.
There are hosts that are tender, and strong,
And true.
If you seek them here to-day.
But beware of the false friends who beguile,
When you say lies through the eyes.
They will laugh and gloat with alluring smiles,
But they fall you one by one.
One by one, should misfortune come,
With they fall and fade away.
For their hands grow cold and their lips
grow dry.
When they think it will not pay,
Ah! then does the true friend prove his worth.
With his strong arm to the aid—
If a glimpse of heaven be found on earth,
'Tis the smile of such a friend.

Rewards and Punishments.

The mother of six children was talking seriously with the mother of one. As is usual with young mothers the latter was most vigilant in repressing any inclination to wrong-doing on the part of her little one. She was afraid to pass over a fault, and was solicitous to ascertain how she ought to punish any indiscretion of the baby culprit. The older woman, smiling, said, "I am afraid we all go through this phase in bringing up our children. Baby No. 1 is more strictly looked after and more frequently punished for misbehavior than are his little successors. No. 2 and No. 3 are not so often spanked as was No. 1 and by the time No. 7 arrives there is a good deal of indulgence. If I had my children to bring up again I should punish less and reward more. Praise is an incentive to right doing, while blame lays a heavy burden on a little heart. Children are in a new world, and they make mistakes, just as their elders do. If God were not lenient with us for our transgressions how much greater would our suffering be?"

I always advise mothers who are beginning the rearing of their children to remember, first, that it is almost always possible to avoid an issue, writes Miss Slaughter. Do not utter a command in such a manner that opposition to it will be aroused. I have no patience with another who spends her hour after hour in the effort to break the will of a naughty child. The will should be trained, but never broken. Another thing to remember is that, whether we know it or not, we are always setting examples that the children imitate. Love your little one, and don't worry too much about her.

Some Witty Toasts.

At a certain banquet a crusty old bachelor gave the toast, "Woman—she requires no eulogy; she speaks for herself!"
Upon another occasion a gallant youth referred to one member of the sex whom he eulogized as a delectable deer, so sweet that honey would blush in her presence!
At the marriage breakfast of a deaf and dumb couple one guest, in the speech of the evening, wished them "unspammable bliss!"
A writer of comedies was giving a banquet in honor of his latest work, at which a jovial guest gave the toast, "The author's very good health! may he live to be as old as his jokes!"
At another gathering were toasted "The Bench and the Bar—if it were not for the Bar there would be little use for the Bench!"
At a shortskirted dinner one of the company suggested, "May we have all the women in the country to shoe and all the men to boot!"

Friendships (Continued).

It cooking very sour fruits, put in a very little salt, and much less sugar will be necessary.
Soot may be easily swept from carpets by sprinkling lavishly with salt before sweeping.
To make fudge smooth and creamy, add to it (while making) a level teaspoonful of cornstarch.
Stained floor boards can be cleaned by scrubbing with chloride of lime, using a tablespoonful of a pail of water.
Tarnished articles of brass when washed in the water in which potatoes have been boiled will be as bright as new.
If you drop grease on the kitchen floor, scatter salt on it and then rub with water. The spot will come out easily.
Lively pancakes on soft paper in front of the oven if you wish to be sure of their being absolutely free from grease.
If eggs are placed in hot water for a few seconds before breaking the whites will separate from the yolks very easily. They must be cooled by whipping up the whites.
Carpenter planes are greatly improved if the blades of the dry copra nut are sprinkled upon them when they are half baked. The copra nut does not stick, but browns delicately, giving a fine flavor.

What We See in the Mirror.

An amusing viewpoint of the mirror question is reported by a recent writer who overheard two girls talking behind a shop counter. One of them asked the other if she liked her own looks in the glass. The other replied that honestly she never appears to be surprised at her reflection. She never looked at herself as tall and thin, with gray eyes. The mirror showed her a short roly poly, with brown eyes. When she had her picture taken she found a rickety youngster, a colorless and a pretty girl with light hair. Her friends all said that the pretty girl with the light hair was she, so she accepted their verdict and hung two copies of that photograph in her room, to look at gleefully and say, "That is you, that is how you really look."

The Mexican Crisis.

It is a mad world, a very, very mad world! At a time when peace conferences and celebrations are in preparation, and arbitration and disarmament seem to be becoming hastily within the vision of the rest, it all fades away into nothingness before the rude shock of war. That is what the present crisis means, war. The great mass of the American people have war in their hearts, and their hands clutch eagerly for guns, that they may kill some of their fellow creatures.—The Public.

New Hope for Sufferers From Paralysis.

There are cases of paralysis that cannot be cured. But that is far different from saying that every case of paralysis is incurable. There is absolute proof that many forms of this disease are curable. Of the cases that cannot be cured many can be so benefited that the formerly helpless sufferer will once more find life worth living.
Attention is called to the remarkable cures that have been effected in cases of partial paralysis, and other severe nervous disorders, by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Some of these cures are so wonderful as to challenge belief, but in every case the statements have been carefully verified and may be investigated by anyone interested. In this connection the case of Miss B. Milhenny, of St. John, N. B., is worthy of the most careful attention. Miss Milhenny says: "Some three years ago I was taken seriously ill with diptheria. The doctor brought me safely through this dreaded trouble, and I was assumed to be cured. But two weeks later I took a relapse, my throat and limbs becoming paralyzed. I could neither speak nor walk. I was under the best medical care, and after a few weeks was able to sit up in bed, but my throat was still completely paralyzed and I could only utter unintelligible sounds. I was treated by three of St. John's best physicians, for this trouble and my case was given up as hopeless. A friend asked me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, but I had spent so much on medicine without help that I thought it would be only a further waste of money. However, I felt myself growing daily weaker and weaker, and I decided as a last chance that I would try the Pills. By the time I had taken a half dozen boxes I could walk across the floor, something that doctors had told me could never happen again. I still continued taking the Pills, my speech returned, and I felt myself in perfect health. My friends thought my restoration nothing short of a miracle and I think myself that I have to thank Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that I am living today, and I feel confident they can do quite as much for others as they did for me."
Dr. Williams' Pink Pills effect cures in cases of this kind because they make new, rich, red blood, which feeds and strengthens the nerves, and tones up the whole system. If you are in need of a medicine give these pills a trial. We are confident you will not be disappointed. Sold by all medicine dealers, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Shad.

A few years ago shad were in a fair way to be counted as a luxury, if, indeed, they continued to be counted at all. The shad fishing industry in the Delaware River fell off to such an extent that it hardly paid the fisherman to operate their seines. This year as the shad season approaches the fisherman are getting ready for it in the expectation that they will surpass the catch of 4,000 in a single day, which is the top notch record to the present time. The reason for this increase is that the government took hold of the matter, instituted the artificial hatchery system, and since then has annually stocked the Delaware with millions of young shad. The results are more and more shad, and nets running from 500 to 700 fathoms in length to handle each season's catch. The shad industry is a striking example of the possibilities of the government's policy for the protection and propagation of edible fish.—New York Fishing Gazette.

I think that the enfranchisement of women is likely to have the following results:—

1. To improve the general relations between men and women.
2. To better the social and economic prospects of the most oppressed classes of working women.
3. To help forward the Temperance movement.
4. Probably, after the first shock is over, to steady and make more consistent the political judgment of the ordinary voter.—Professor Gilbert Murray.

A Flaw in His Character.

I had known him for about four years. He had seemed to me to be a boy of good principles, a hard worker and dependable. I grew to like him very much. I met him a few days ago. He was with his parents. I passed them once within a few feet,
and heard him speak to his father in a disrespectful manner. I saw the face of the father and the face of the mother—though they did not see me.
What pain shot across their faces in that instant! Down, down went the boy in my estimation. I thought hard for minutes, but could find no fault,
but there a law came back to my ears
those insistent words to his father,
and I could never forget the pain
which his insolence had caused.

Now this lad is good in many ways,
but he is a poor son who will cut to the heart those nearest and dearest to him. I am sure that he never would have allowed himself to speak to me that way. Yet, at best, I am only a friend. I wonder why he allows himself to speak in such a way to his father?

It certainly is a puzzle, when you stop to think about it, isn't it? It would be better if it were not so and I think about it—not after it is done, but in time to prevent it.

A boy's true character isn't to be measured correctly by his company manners. I like to see a courteous young man. It goes a long way toward making him a successful man. But I want to know whether all his courtesy is spent on strangers or cordiality away from a home, or whether he is as courteous at home as he is outside.

Real courtesy is an accomplishment worth acquiring. All the best piece to practice it is at home. The boy was faulted for his habit of using courtesy as if it were as far to forget himself as to answer his father with a sharp word, as I heard this boy do.

His very courtesy, often practiced, helps him to respect those who are nearest to him in the home; and that very respect would back the words which hurt.

Do you know what I've found out?
Well, it's worth putting on. The boy who always says "Good morning" to the boys in the street, the one who sees them for the first time, and the boy who invariably says "Thank you"
for every courtesy shown to him in the home, has half as many friends
as the boy who never says a word.

An exchange makes the following pertinent comment: "A farmer who was carrying or express parcel from a city mail office or house, was accosted
by a local merchant: 'Why didn't you buy those goods from me? I could've saved the express and besides you would have been patronizing a home store, which helps pay the taxes and build up this locality.'
With characteristic frankness, the farmer asked: 'Why didn't you patronize your home paper and advertise?'
I read it and didn't know you had the goods I have here, nor do I ever see your name in the paper inviting me
to come to your store."
