C. W. N. A. HAS GREAT MEETING

blue room of the hall, afterwards enjoying the beautiful grounds and listening to the military band attached to the Governor General's residence. Later refreshments were served in the Hall, and afterwards the grounds and band were enjoyed once more. The same evening a dance was given in the Chateau by the Hotel management and supper served in the magnificent Ballroom of the Chateau. The floor of the ball room was pronounced by experts to be perfect—a statement the editor had to take in good faith, as he unfortunately does not toss the light fantastic—but the refreshments served in the dining room as before-mentioned, was beyond criticism and beyond praise, and the evidence he gives is gained by first-hand knowledge—for although he does not dance, he does eat—and believe me he ate there.

On Friday business started again and excellent papers were read on kindred subjects by experts, and in the afternoon the delegates were taken in automobiles over the city of Ottawa, and then to the Dominion Experimental Farm in the outskirts of the city. Here again refreshments were served, and speeches indulged in.

The ladies of the party were well looked after. They were dined at the Riverview Golf Club and had the pleasure of hearing, among other distinguished persons, Lady Foster who took as her theme the subject which is so close to the heart of her illustrious husband, "The League of Nations." The Ottawa Committee also arranged that they should visit the National Galleries and the Royal Mint. Still other sightseeing trips were taken to the E. B. Fidy Co. and J. R. Booth's Company plant in Hull, paper making and manufacturing establishments which are household words in the Dominion. Paper for The Observer is made at the Eddy mill. There were more than five hundred delegates, including the wives, and every province in the country was represented.

The combined circulation of the papers represented runs into millions, and reach into the remotest parts of our country, moulding the thought of the people, and leading the way for good citizenship, and high ideals. The meetings in Ottawa were memorable ones, the programme of speakers was a carefully drawn one, and such subjects as "Building a Weekly Newspaper," "What the Country Merchant Expects from his Weekly Newspaper," "The Editorial Column" and "Canadian Literature" were among the questions discussed. From the moment when the Mayor of Ottawa welcomed and conferred the freedom of the city upon the delegates on the first day to the time when the last delegate left for his home, the people of Ottawa showed their kindness.

As one looks at the historic buildings which make up the Capital city, and remembers the price paid during the world war for citizenship in the Dominion and in the world war, he approaches the hill with more or less reverent mien, for the Parliament Buildings stand for an ideal, an ideal which cost the lives of millions, and sent the Kaiser to Doorn chopping trees.

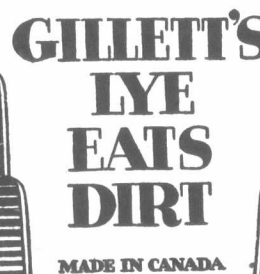

To the railways who co-operated to make the convention a success, and did so much for the comfort of all, to Societies whose organization for the entertainment of visitors was so perfect, to the manager, E. Roy Sayles, whose interest for the well being of the members never flags throughout the year, and whose efforts in connection with this year's gathering was crowned with success, the C. W. N. A. owes a debt of appreciation which will be acknowledged in every weekly newspaper worth while in the whole Dominion of Canada. And as A. T. Ross of the Chatham Commercial said to the writer when wishing him good-

SCHOOL MATTERS

A trustees' and teachers' meeting was held in the office of J. Stirling King, secretary, Tuesday evening, for the purpose of considering re-hiring the present staff of teachers, but two of the resignations, Miss McBeath and G. W. Montgomery, are definite, while the two primary teachers are likely to be staying. The principal is yet undecided. Miss McBeath would not consider a position on the staff for next year on account of illness in her family, and G. W. Montgomery wishes to return to his law course.

Watching Life of Plants.

From fuller information, now at hand in regard to the machine by aid of which the Indian scientist, Sir J. C. Bose, has been making visible in London the ingrowth of plants, shows that he does much more than make visible what everybody already knew—that plants increase in size. He also has revealed that the growth of a plant is by no means steady or continuous—that it is affected by many of the influences besides mere nutriment that affect the growth of animals. In short, this machine, which is called a crescograph and magnifies movement a million times, proves that plants are much more alive than it is customary to credit them with being, and it is not an altogether fanciful notion that when the facts in relation to plant life become better known, something of consideration for their "feelings" and something of compunction about treating them cruelly may develop.

Pharmacy Popular.

Pharmacy is a popular pursuit among the women of South America, according to a Y. W. C. A. leader in that country, because it is a protected profession and is considered womanly. South American girls have not gone into public life and into the business world and the trades as North American girls have and still consider, as a rule, only the so-called protected lines of work. They teach and sew and a few have become typists and stenographers, but most women who take up any profession train for nursing, medicine or pharmacy. Chemistry is also a popular study.

Rather Embarrassing.

We had just moved into a new house. I was dressing when the bell rang, and mother went to the door. Sure enough it was the young man I was trying to avoid. But instead of saying I was not at home, mother said: "Oh, let me show you our new house." Everything was lovely until approaching the closet, where I was crouched down on my knees, half-dressed, mother said: "This is where we keep all our old junk and rubbish." I shall never forget how embarrassed I was.—Exchange.

To Break Him of the Habit.

"John," said her husband's wife, "don't believe you have smoked one of those lovely cigars I gave you at Christmas."
"No, my dear, I haven't," replied his wife's husband. "As a matter of fact, I intend to keep them until our little Willy grows up and wants to learn to smoke."

Monocle Is Losing Hold

That It Took on the Army
When Empire Was Young

One of the decaying institutions is the monocle; or, is it becoming one of the lost arts? Eyeglasses and "specs" are multiplying, but the monocle has seen its day. It played a shining part on some quite respectable faces in English society, and in some rather curious families of American society. It was popular for a time and then its popularity waned. Popularity nearly always goes that way.

Several explanations have been given as to why the monocle was. Sir Horace Rumbold wrote that the fashion of wearing it was introduced at the Congress of Vienna—a congress which remade the map of Europe back in the last century. He told that it was a Dutch "exquisite"—which is the diplomatic language for "dude"—one Jonkheer Breesle, who was the first man to wear a monocle, and he showed this brand new fad to the diplomats and their followers assembled at Vienna. After that introduction the fad spread to all parts of Europe, but took its strongest grip on England.

Another authority has said that the monocle made its first conquest in British army circles. An order had been issued that army officers should not wear eyeglasses or spectacles, these being considered evidence of defective eyes. A number of officers then took to wearing a monocle on that account, their thought being something like that which prompted so many officers and enlisted men to take to carrying a short cane, which came to be called "cavalry stick." From military circles the monocle extended its influence to civilians and came to be "quite the thing, don't you know."

Toward the end of the first quarter of the nineteenth century the fad of wearing a monocle had become so popular that a writer of a book on the care of the eyes and the preservation of the vision inveighed against it. The name of the writer was Dr. Kitchener and in 1823 he published this book, the title of which was "Economy of the Eyes." Referring to the monocle he wrote: "A single glass set in a smart ring, is often used by trinket fanciers for fashion's sake. These folks have not the least defect in their sight, and are not aware of the mischievous consequences of such irritation."

So They Say.

"The test of a man's education is what he chooses to do when he is not obliged to do anything." — Mr. Asner Bowater.

"North country men believe that a large part of the wisdom and nearly all the virtues are to be found in the north." — Bishop Welldon.

"I rejoice when I hear there are so many more women than men. You are not aware of too much of a good thing." — Miss Lena Ashwell.

"The truest happiness in this world is for a man to go home and say, 'I have done a good day's work.'" — Alex. Richardson, M.P.
"If people will only try to give up the dreadful carping spirit and habit of finding fault with everything on God's earth and, instead, work to help to put things right, it would be far better not only for the men of to-day, but also for those who will come after them." — Gen. Sir Francis Lloyd.

Words of Wit and Wisdom.

"There seem to be three sexes—men, women, and parsons." — Bishop of Birmingham.
"The London dialect has changed greatly since the time of Dickens." — Prof. Peter Giles.

"There is a real enthusiasm for knowledge—throughout Yorkshire, at any rate." — The Dean of York.

"If a man marries a woman for beauty alone he is making a very speculative bargain." — Mrs. H. A. L. Fisher.

"The world has been my school; the men and women moving about it have been my teachers." — W. A. Appleton.

"When we consider what a nation loses through ignorance, it is folly to try and save on education." — Mr. J. R. Clynes, M.P.

"The happiness of the home is enhanced when the men return home at a reasonable hour." — Sir Robert Wallace, K.C.

Britain's Nickname.

Just as "Uncle Sam" is symbolic of the United States, and "Jean Crapeau," with his exaggerated top hat and tightly waxed moustache, represent France in literature and pictorial art, John Bull, bluff, hearty, and heavy-set, is the national figure of England.

Both he and his description date back to 1712, when Dr. John Arbuthnot wrote his political allegory entitled "The History of John Bull," a book which caused a great deal of comment at the time. Though this book itself has practically disappeared, John Bull, well fed on the roast beef of England, has survived more than two centuries.

It Was All Right.

Conductor (in a whisper): "It will be all right, sir, if you don't get too noisy."

The oldest national flag in the world is that of Denmark, which has been in use since the year 1210.

FACTS OF THE CASE ARE TOLD BY MERCHANT

IN MISERY FOR SIX YEARS FROM STOMACH TROUBLE UNTIL TANLAC BROUGHT HIM PERFECT HEALTH, SAYS HALIFAX BUSINESS-MAN.

"I want to recommend Tanlac for it is the direct cause of my being in better health today than for years," said Elijah N. Thomas, merchandise dealer for eighteen years or more in Lower Sackville, Halifax, N. S.

"For six years I had a bad form of stomach trouble. My appetite was so poor that many times I got up from the table without eating. When I did eat anything I had awful cramping pains and gas formed which caused my heart to palpitate so I could hardly breathe. I lost weight gradually, lost much sleep, and my condition was so bad I can hardly describe it. "The first bottle of Tanlac didn't seem to help me, but Mrs. Thomas reminded me my case was of long standing and I tried a second bottle and began to get better. Now all my troubles are gone. I think Tanlac is a grand medicine."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

FEW HORSE-DRAWN VEHICLES

Carriage and Wagon Builders Have About Given Up That Branch of the Business.

The members of a firm formerly prominent in selling horse-drawn vehicles on the Pacific coast give some interesting figures showing how the carriage and wagon builders have lost business. Due to the inroads of the automobile industry in the transportation field.

It seems that there were 14,000 buggies sold in Los Angeles county alone in 1896, and 6,500 wagons. Two years later the first motorcar appeared and business thereafter declined steadily. It is doubtful if 100 buggies a year are sold now in California. Salesmen working in rural districts used to sell an average of two buggies a day and more sets of harness. One prominent wagon builder sold $8,000,000 worth of horse-drawn vehicles in 1896. In 1905 they stopped manufacturing them and concentrated their production facilities on motorcars, which they had gradually developed as their wagon trade decreased.

Not all firms were so far-sighted or fortunate, however, and many factories that formerly manufactured thousands of horse-drawn vehicles are but a memory. Most wagon builders of progressive mind installed motorcar departments and are now reaping a harvest as manufacturers of special truck and van bodies to be fitted to standard motorcar truck chassis, work for which their mechanical equipment, working forces and experience are particularly well adapted.

Electric Signs in Churches.

Churches are making use of electric signs and are also using colored lights to make the services more impressive and are using flood light to display the beauties of the stained glass windows.
