Under the apple tree, sombody said,
'Look at that robin's nest overhead!
All of sharp sticks, and of mud and elay—
What a rough home for a summer day!'
Gaunt stood the apple tree, gaunt and bare
And creaked in the winds which bluster

And creaked in the winds which blustered there.

The nest was wet with the April rain; The clay ran down in an ugly stain; Little if looked, I must truly say, Like a lovely home for a summer day. Up in the apple tree, somebody langhed, Little you know of the true home-crait. Laugh, if you like, at my sticks and clay; They'll make a good home for a sun mer day. May turns the apple tree pink and white, Sunny all day, and fragrant at night. My babies will never feel the showers, For rain can't get through these feathers of ours.

Saug under my wings they will cuddle and sieep.

The happless says awake or asleep, Said the mother-robin flying away. After more of the sticks and mud and clay.

Under the apple tree sombody sighed.

"There is no one to suspect, sobbed with cold woman.

"In the house where Gabrielle, my daughter whom you have seen, old in Hannah, the cook; Mr. and Mrs. be Beauchamp, friends of my poor dear which subshaid in his boyhood—the best, the dividest of people; Mr. Grey, a very old man, too feeble to leave the house; a poor, deformed Miss Morman, and the librarian, Mr. Bassford. None of these would murder a mouse. See the work of the sticks and mud and clay.

Under the apple tree pink and white, sum who will be a sum of the librarian, Mr. Bassford. None of these would murder a mouse. See the work of the sticks and mud and clay.
