Speaker Currie Has Resigned

Now in Hospital Following An Operation

Hon. W. E. Foster, premier, has announced the receipt of the resignation of Hon. Wm. Currie, of Restigouche as speaker of the provincial House of Assembly. It will be remembered that a charge was made against him in connection with the stumpage and was investigated by a royal commission. Mr. Currie, who is in a hospital following an operation, asks Premier Foster that discussion on the commission's report in the legislature be not taken up until he can be present. The Legislature will meet next Thursday.

RUNNING A PAPER

Jim Jones he was an editor—that's what he tried to be; He bought himself a printing press and started in to see Just what there was in editin', but when he'd canvassed 'round Some fifteen hundred editors in that town he found—

They all knew more about it than he could hope to know. They told him: "You must run her, Jones, and run her so and so. Be sure to boom the Baptists—they're sure to help you out. And give the good old Methodists a good salvation shout.

"Give every man a notice—be sure and let it be known Whenever Mayor Jinks is seen perambulating town. Put in a few free locals for all the stores and give Away some free subscriptions if you wish your sheet to live."

Well Jones, he did just what they said, for fear they'd make a row. But the more he tried to please 'em all the more they told him how. Until at last he took his book and laid it on the shelf. Then ran the paper in the ground, and followed it himself.

THOSE COPPER TOES

"This town's just full of shoe salesmen, a new one every week—they're shoeing youths and maidens fair and matrons old and sleek.

But why, forsooth, do all these stores that cater for our trade forget to stock the slickest boot that ever cobbler made? We gaze and shake our heads again, 'tain't those, nor those, nor those, we were looking for the little boots that had the copper toes.

When we were kids—dear bless my soul, but that was long ago—we wouldn't think of wearin' boots without a copper toe.

Why, then these boots with copper toes, they make my eye grow dim a-thinkin' how we used to kick an empty salmon tin. We'd scuff the soles out in a month, we'd wear the heels away, and the observance of the blackin' brush would keep 'em kind of gray.

The strings would burst, we'd tie them up in wags born of despair, but that strip of copper on the toe, by Jine, 'twas always there.

The youngsters nowadays no doubt, are dressed in ways more fair than the patent leather on their feet to the detriment on their hair—but just as sure as mountain stream into the ocean flows, they've never made a thing to beat them with copper toes.

SHORTONROMANCE

Some Eminently Prosaic Proposals of Marriage.

Hardly as Picturesque as the Stilted Forms So Popular With Lovers in the Pages of Fiction, but Meant the Same Thing.

Perhaps the romantic proposals of fiction are more picturesque than the usual proposals of real life; the fact that lovers are reluctant witnesses make it hard to tell. But certainly the queer or comic proposals and attempted proposals of fiction cannot be any queerer than some of those recorded in actual chronicle of countryside tradition.

Mr. Howells in his reminiscences gives an amusing middle West example of a country bachelor who belatedly made up his mind to marry, and in his default of female acquaintance took his place on the top rail of a roadside fence and called to the first woman who passed: "Say! You a married woman?"

"And then at the frightened answer indignantly gasped out, 'Yes, sir!' he offered a mere 'Oh!' for an apology and explanation, and let himself vanish by falling into the cornfield behind him."

Almost equally contemptuous of finesse was a New England bachelor in middle life who had lived contentedly on his farm under the able administration of an aunt only a year or two older than himself. His next-door neighbor, and the owner of a small but cozy farmstead, was a competent and contented spinster, in whom Enos had displayed less than the ordinary neighborly interest. But one day he balled her over the dividing fence: "Hi, Selina!"

Selina did not immediately understand that she was being addressed, and so Enos leaned across the fence and continued shouting "Hi! Hi! Hi!" until he attracted her attention.

"Well, Enos, what is it?" she inquired, turning.

Enos allowed her to walk close to the fence before he replied. "Aunt Jane's going to get married, so I guess I better, too. What d'ye think about it, Selina?"

"I think ye better, Enos." "Then ef ye'll have me, guess I better marry you, Selina."

"Ef I will, Enos, I guess ye better." "Will ye, Selina?" "I won't Enos." "Shucks, Selina, ye better."

"That's your say-so, Enos. My idee is, I bettern't!"

Certainly, whether she would have bettered herself or otherwise, she did not marry Enos, and he remained a bachelor.

Even less of grace and glamor attended the courtship of a prosaic youth by the name of Joseph and his sweetheart—if that term is not too poetic—the excellent and practical Susannah. Coming up her father's farm lane, Joseph perceived her crossing it at the far end with a bucket of pig wash, and called to her to wait for him.

"Can't stop, Joe, the pigs are waiting," she shouted back.

"Joe come and see, I got something to say to ye!" yelled Joe. "Ye can say it after I've fed the pigs!" shrieked Susannah. Joe broke into a run. As he approached her, where she had paused reluctantly to await him, he panted indignantly, "Ye got to let the darn critters wait for once, Sue! Hang it, I want to propose!"

"Come along and propose, then," responded Susannah with sweet encouragement. "Ye kin do it while we feed the pigs, can't ye, Joe?"

Joe came and did; Susannah accepted him; the pigs were fed. Whether or no the match was made in heaven, it proved as happy as if its atmosphere of early bliss on earth had not been mingled with the aroma of the pigpen. —Years of My Youth.

A Sidelight.
I've talked with some of the infantry coming down here and they have wonderful tales to tell. The French are wildly enthusiastic over the American campaign—one French regiment passed me going into action waving the American flag.

Some-time when I have time I'll sit down and analyze the sensations: they're indelible—it's a sort of high excitement that makes anything possible. It's taken at least three hits to stop any of our men. Generally they keep on going, nevertheless, until they can't go any farther—then shoot from where they are until they're picked off or the advance goes too far ahead, and the litter bearers get them and bring them in.—From Letter of an American Artillery Lieutenant, printed in Collier's Weekly.

So He Passed.
From France comes the following little story of the irrepressible spirits of the Australian fighting men:

Among the wounded brought into the ward was a young Billjam whom we knew at once was soon going west. He was quite conscious, and an Australian sister set herself to make his last few hours on this planet as comfortable as possible. He wanted to be wrapped up with pillows, and to this she assented: "Put your arms around my shoulders, that I can raise you gently." "You bet your life, sister," whispered the irrepressible lad with a smile; "It's a long, long time since I had my arms around a dinkum Aussie girl." And then he ended his great crusade.
