Incidents in His Life that Will Be Lead with Interest-The People Like IIim. His Rapid Advancement-Picture of

His Rapid Advancement-Pleture of Himself and Family. During the last few months of the life of William 1, emperor of Germany, the young William - he who will succeed It was forseen that the emperor and the then crown prince were both liable to shortly become incapable and an edict was issued giving young William anthority to sleri imperial papers as recent. Two issued giving young William authority to signi imperial papers as regent. Two years ago he ranked only as a major in the army, and people in general spoke with surprise at the slowness with which he advanced, yet all praised the thorough ness of his military education. Innumer able princelings were then above him, as well as untitled men of not much longer service, for a Prussian prince receives his straps at the age of 10! He was com-pelled to work like the rest of his comrades, equally subject to military discipline. Early and late he was with his regiment, ordered about as an ordinary major, saluting his superiors, with little or no attention-in a military way-paid to his roval rank

But suddenly his promotion came. On Jan. 27 last he received as a birthday This was the beginning of his promotion. From that time his advance in other re-spects has been rapid indeed. William is 29 years of age, and is said

William is 29 years of age, and is said to be young looking for his age. He has recently been thus described by George W. Smalley: "William has the appearance of a young man of 25. His upper lip shows a spare blonde mustache, his nose is slightly Roman, with a medium forebead, and his hair stands back like Besthoven's. But despite his comparatively weak chin, his cold bine sys has a brave, daring expres-sion, which reminds one a little of the Great Traderick, whom he is fondly said to resemble in character. He is slender in ble in character. He is slender in build, and shorter in stature than his left hand is badly crippled, and his left arm at least two inches shorter than his left; a defect which has caused as much annoyance and mental pain as ever Byron's formity did. He tries upon every occasion to conceal it, but tries, of course, in wain. Yet the skill he possesses is re-markable. He carries his sword upon parade as well as any officer and has become a most excellent fencer, rides like a Cossack and shoots with unerring aim. "No officer in the army is more popular than this royal scion and none more clever. No wonder that his men are at-tached to him. He has a pleasant word for all, and cracks his joke with the common man as though he were of his number. His training has been very demo-cratic. He attended school at Cassel, boarding with one of the teachers, and treated exactly as one of the other boys. Taking his lunch one day, he noticed one of his comrades eating the black bread which the poorest classes use in Germany. Wishing to taste it, he offered to 'trade' with the boy-the son, I believe, of a poor mechanic-who, of course, was only too glad to do so. It pleased the prince's palate so much that he made an agreement to exchange lunches with the boy every day-and henceforward he always feasted upon the black bread baked in the house of the mechanic. He was graduated after several years at Cassel among the first in his class to the great satisfaction of his parents who attended the commencement. He afterward —as is Hohenzollern custom—attended the university at Bonn and joined the the university at Bonn and Joined the famous Saxo-Borussen corps, over whose annual meetings he still presides, and is as eager as any in rplating the pranks of his student days. And today one meets him in the streets of Berlin in civilian's clothes, mingling with the people like the 'citizen king.'"

"Crown Prince William has carried to excess the old Hohenzollern custom of giving its cadets a military training. Whenever he visits his children his oldest son, who will be 6 next month, has been schooled to give the word of command, schooled to give the word of command, whereupon the two smaller brothers, aged 6 and 4, range themselves beside him, and all give the father a soldierly salute. The other day the crown prince was working, when his attention was drawn to the fact that the sentrice outside his room were constructed with the fact that the sentrice outside his room were capacity of the electric system for transthat the sentries outside his room were presenting arms repeatedly in an inex-plicable way—a thing which German soldiers. be it explained, do in such a peremptory and vehement manner that the action can be heard for a considerable distance. He was puzzled at this, went out and discovered that his lit-tle boys were having some fun passing up

It was suggested that, if possible, the present bronze statue of Morton, Indiana's war covernor, now in Circle park, Indianapolis, should be, in some way, incorporated with the monu-mental structure or made to bear a rela-tion thereto. It was further provided that the design might comprise either a column or a memorial fail, with mosaics, bass reliefs and groups of statuary. The reward offered to the author of the se-lected design was that of being appointed supervising architect or soulptor with a cost of executing it.
