The Week's War.

As was predicted in the article under the above heading last Monday, the past week has been prolific of events and a fit termination to the operations being carried on was the complete surrender of Turkey, which country on Thursday, October 31st, by her representatives, signed the armistice agreement transferring all her possessions in European Asia to the Allies, subject to the terms, which will hereafter be imposed upon all countries capitulating by agreement.

With Bulgaria and Turkey out of the fight, and the collapse of Austria imminent, if not already brought about by revolution, the Hohenzollern will be left entirely alone to fight a losing battle. No word has been received from the German Government since President Wilson's final note was submitted through the diplomatic agency of Switzerland, but German press comment breathes defiance, and refusal to (with or without allies) submit to the terms offered, or to "allow their country to be handled as Bulgaria was handled." Whether or not Germany humbles herself to accept the offer made to her by the United States, makes but little difference to her ultimate fate. The German vision of a compromise peace has been dissipated, and the punishment which her military rulers have brought upon her is about to be inflicted. Inexorably and determinedly the Allies are drawing a cordon of steel around the German armies in France and Belgium, and slowly but surely expelling the unseemable Hun from his places of occupation. While armistice discussions have been proceeding, and exchanges of peace notes taking place, Foch the inflexible has been steadily pushing all his advantages, and on the Western and Italian fronts has been pursuing his strategical purpose to such good effect that he has pushed the Germans out of Western Belgium and to the Dutch border. Also they have been forced out of the greater part of Northern France, which for the past four years has been held by their armies. South they are out of St. Mihiel and are now being driven north of Verdun, and along both sides of the river Meuse. Their presence has been removed from a large part of the beautiful and fertile province of Champagne, and north of the Aisne they are being harassed and harried by the Allies, who are surrounding and hemming them in on all sides. Eventually they will be cooped up in a corner of Belgium, away from their defences on the Upper Rhine in Alsace. In the event of their crossing the Meuse anywhere between Metz and Namur, the forest of Ardennes would cut them off from available communication. South of Metz the Americans hold the German lines of communication under their fire, and in consequence there can be no retreat by this avenue. A retirement north of Namur will probably be a forced one, and should this happen the enemy will have to make his way out of Belgium, if possible, through the narrow neck between Liege and the Dutch frontier. Valenciennes has not yet been wholly occupied, though the British surround that town, and the Germans are still desperately holding it, their object being to gain time for a withdrawal of their forces now in the Lys-Scheldt Valley, while in order to maintain their other lines of retreat they are stubbornly fighting to hold the ground between the Serre and Oise rivers, in an effort to protect themselves from being overpowered in Champagne and to the southeast. No time is being given them to rest or recuperate. The Allies hang on doggedly and everywhere press them heavily, daily gaining more ground and taking prisoners and material. We might expect, especially should disaffection and discontent spread among the German soldiers, as rapidly as it is spreading, or reported to be spreading in Germany, that any day the resistance of their armies will be broken and retreat merged into a disorderly rout.

The trouble in Austria, if the text of the cabled dispatches be accepted as a genuine statement, appears to be increasing, but there is so much of the Mephistophelian character in both the German and Austrian make-up, that the news may be inspired with a purpose. The phrase German-Austrian Government is not a happy one, and unintentionally gives away the game. In all the actions of both Governments the "cloven hoof" has been easily discernible, and insincerity has been stamped over all their peace offers, but with the High Council of the Allies now in session to define and declare the terms on which they will grant the Central Powers an armistice, no fear need be apprehended that such terms will be easy of acceptance. Nevertheless the moment is critical. Notwithstanding the withdrawal of Turkey as a beligerent, and the momentary defection of Austria from Germany, the latter country is by no means to be despised as a military factor, and presents as yet a problem of great difficulty, the solution of which may not be reached for a considerable period.

Late official despatches, received last night, announce that Austria has agreed to and signed the armistice terms presented to her by the Allies. By this collapse of her chief ally Germany is left alone to continue the war or surrender at the Allies pleasure. The capture of Valenciennes by the British, must necessarily compel the German commander in that section to withdraw his forces or run the risk of having them surrounded and captured. In either case the Germans are not in a happy position, and later news may contain the pleasing intelligence that a wholesale capitulation of the German Army has been made, as it is obvious that with Valenciennes taken, the German, should he attempt a retreat, will be badly mauled by the British forces in that vicinity.

Deputation of Catholic Citizens

WAITS ON ARCHBISHOP.

Some weeks ago a number of Catholic gentlemen called at the Palace to interview His Grace the Archbishop with reference to a retrial, which had obtained widespread circulation concerning the Rev. Father Nangle, Chaplain with the British Forces. The object of their waiting upon His Grace was to draw his attention to the report and ask whether he had any statement to make on the matter. The Archbishop stated that some months previously he had heard the rumour referred to, but had disregarded it as being unworthy of serious consideration. Of late, however, he said, the rumour had become so persistent and so many inquiries had been directed to him about the matter that he had deemed it expedient to take measures to have an investigation made through the Militia Department in order that he might be able to give an authoritative denial to the absurd report. He intimated that inquiries were then being prosecuted through official channels, and that as soon as they were concluded he would communicate to them the result.

Accordingly, His Grace's request, the gentlemen interested again called at the Palace yesterday. His Grace informed them that he was then in a position to state that the investigation conducted through the Militia Department here and the Pay and Record Office in London had elicited a statement from the Army Chaplains Department that Father Nangle was on duty with his Regiment, and that there was no truth whatever in the allegation made concerning him. His Grace requested the deputation to take steps to give the widest possible publicity to this official denial. He went on to say that he could not too strongly condemn the circulation of such a report calculated to reflect seriously on the character of a Reverend gentleman who at that very time was doing his sacred work faithfully amongst the soldiers at the front.

The Archbishop assured the deputation that he deeply deplored the necessity which compelled him to make public reference to this matter, so painful to all concerned; but in justice to Father Nangle, a worthy Priest who had been so devoted to the interests of our Newfoundland soldier boys, and in justice to his friends, he felt it incumbent upon him to issue this unequivocal and categorical contradiction of the report.

Woman Knocked Down.

Near about six o'clock Saturday evening, an old woman who was intending to board the street car at the bottom of Patrick Street, on Water Street, was knocked down by the wheel of a long cart bound west, a young man named S. Baker, driving. The driver, feeling the impact, stopped the horse, and with the assistance of another, picked the old woman up, and carried her into a nearby shop. There it was ascertained that she was only rather shaken up, that no serious injuries had been sustained, and that her name was Mrs. Hanson, of Holloway Street. The teamster then sent for a cab, and accompanied by Constables Kelly and Wade, the old lady was taken to her home, where a doctor soon after visited her. The young man is to be commended on his action in stopping to attend to the woman, as others might have gone off, leaving her on the ground. The lights at this section of Water Street were not on, and it was very dark there, hence the accident.

McMurdo's Store News.

MONDAY, Nov. 4th, 1918.
Camphenol combines the antiseptic, deodorant, purifying and disinfectant properties of Carbolic Acid and Camphor and is a very handy household requisite at this time. It is powerful enough to be really efficient without being inconveniently strong or caustic. It can be used as a general disinfectant, at the toilet, and in cases of wounds, burns, old sores, boils, carbuncles, and in many skin troubles. It should be in every home, as its use helps to keep away sickness and infection. Large bottle 60c.

Police Court.

A returned soldier, given in charge by Lieut. Clark Saturday night, was charged with insulting that officer and trying to fight him. He was fined $5 and had to give his personal bond in $100.

For a breach of the street traffic regulations a cabman was fined $1. The defence of S. Frelich's case was given and Mr. W. J. Higgins succeeded in making a good impression on the court. Mr. Morine made an eloquent address, which lasted for over an hour, but despite the excellence thereof the case was dismissed.
