Commissions were recorded. Much of the money wagered was on the proposition of hw long Munroe would last. Many thought that the instructions of Kid McCoy would make Munroe the most formidable who ever tackled Jeffries. The fact that the latter was reported to have tipped the scales at 225 pounds srortly before entering the ring made them think that he would be much slower than when he fought Corbett. Another element which helped along the speculative impluse was a knowledge of the rules, which personal Resting and Resting
