The cottons manufactured in Canada, he

The cottons manufactured in Canada, he considers, are too heavy for the South American market, but a thinner and lighter article would, in his opinion, find a ready sale in Argentina, Uruguay and Brazil.

He thinks also that a business of considerable proportions could be done in Canada in manufacturing wool imported from Argentina and Uruguay into cheaper forms of tweed and other articles and then supplied to those countries. Regular communication with return cargoes would largely develop the business, as it would many others between Canada and South America.

Horse nails, nails, tacks, etc., can also be produced in Canada at a rate of cost that will admit of their exportation to South America in large quantities.

The question comes up: "What are you going to do about it?" Commissioner Jones has no doubt at all that the first thing to be done is to subsidize a line of steamers to insure rapid and regular communication. These would carry mails and passengers, also lighter do about it?" Commissioner Jones freight and perhaps arricles of the kind called "perishable." For other freight-sailing vessels would answer just as well and would be says the best plan is reduce or abolish our elected in 1887 were unseated as a body and a new election ordered, on proof being given that the competitors, the Americans, have a tariff rather higher than ours which they show no disposition to reduce. On general principles, it will be time enough for us to get on the Free Trade track when they do, which means that the thing is indefinitely postponed. Meantime we had better follow the example of Great Britain by subsidizing mail steamers to a reasonable amount. That is the orthodox Free Trade plan and ought to be approved of by The Mail. Moreover, it is now being strongly urged upon the new American administration by two such influential Kepublicans as ex-Governor Dingley of Maine and Senator Frye. We hope shortly to see some effective measure of this kind for the promotion of trade with the West Indies and South America proposed by the Government and supported by both Free Traders and Protectionists in Parliament.

There was something grand in the Old Man's defenc of Mr. Dewdney, and of his own selection of him for the Ministry of the Interior. He took all blame to himself and to his cabinet, and to Sir David Macpherson in shattered health in a foreign country he made no direct allusion, Though Peter Mitchell Sirver of the gentleman so freely charged should explain through this fereign tast of the great and still associated with the great majority of those declared elected by no possibility could have had any hand in the matter, many men who had done good work in organizing and carrying on the affairs of the college were left off and a new regime in stalled. shattered health in a foreign country he made no direct allusion, Though Peter Mitchell and Jim Edgar insinuated that Mr. Dewdney's appointment was due to Sir John's anxiety to close his mouth respecting the warnings that he had forwarded, or ought to have forwarded, there can be no doubt that Sir John appointed Mr. Dewdney because he was the only man be could find for the job who would not be a mere figurehead and knowing nothing of the country and people concerned would not be country and people concerned would not be perpentually "asking Sir John." Who else country and people concerned would not be perpetually "asking Sir John." Who else was there eligible for the position? The late Minister, Mr. Thomas White, a clear-headed man of renarkable industry, through lack of knowledge of local conditions inaugurated many a scheme that has not panned out very happily. Mr. Dewdney has managed to incur the jealousy and suspicion of many members on both sides of the House; but departmental officers who have come in contact with him say that already Sir John's choice is vindicated and he is the right man in the right place. Anyhow, it is only fair to give him a chance, and Mr. Laurier's indictment of him fell to the ground the moment his chief assumed responsibility. There was "nothing to it" after Sir John had fathered the imaginary offences of his official subordinate, and the Minister, Mr. Thomas White, a clear-headed unreasonable opposition to his ap and to acquit himself wisely in his city. If he fails to lend himself and worth in energy and ability to this end, Sir John Macdonald will have just cause to regret his chivalr ous defence of him.

For driving out the scrotnious humors, and thus removing the predisposing cause, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a sovereign remedy. The Chairman in his maugural address, calle The Chairman in his mangural address, called attention to the necessity of increased school accommodation, estimating the number of children to be provided for at 22,000, whereas the present attendance, 20,000, overcrowded the existing schools. There was an immediate necessity to supply school accommodation for at least 4500 publis. The Chairman also favored the making of some special arrangement to supply those children whose parents were too poor to provide them books and the necessary clothing to attend school, with these supplies. He further recommended that the Minister of Education be interviewed with a view of placing before him the greath ardship caused by the too frequent change in text books. In conclusion he suggested that the School Act be so amended as to assume all citizens to be supporters of Public Schools, leaving it with them to object.
