WILL CARLETON'S WIFE.

A Post Who Finds a True Helpmeet in His Wife.

Such a woman as Mrs. Will Carleton is by nature a large part of a successful husband's career, writes Edward W. Bok in the September Ladies' Home Journal. She is the perfect embodiment of everything that is best and most loveable in woman. No sweeter disposition was ever given to any one. Trials and perplexities know no greater foe than her smile. Everything about her is quiet and gentle. Her life, her work, her charities, her manner, her conversation, all are alike—she is womanly in every respect. The fads of the day trouble her not. The substantial basis of belief in what is good, built by her sterling parentage, is her creed. In her home Mrs. Carleton is a perfect manager. The house, supported from the proceeds of her husband's pen, in Green-avenue, Brooklyn, reflects the nature of she who rules over it. There is no outer show, no inner estentation; a gentle air of refinement permeates every room. Every piece of furniture is of the best; cheap things Mrs. Carleton abhors. What she buys is calculated to be useful as well as ornamental. Her housekeeping instinct is as perfect as is her taste in the embellishment of a room. Size is queen of her domain, and every domestic detail is under her own supervision. Through her table she studies her husband's pleasure; through her home she studies his comfort.

With the reins of her domestic duties thoroughly mastered with one hand, she drives comfort.

With the reins of her domestic duties thoroughly mastered with one hand, she drives Pegasus with the other. Many little detail in her husband's busy life as a literary man is taken charge of by her. She sees his verses long before the editor, the publisher or the public, and upon her literary judgment the poet often relies. Mr. Carleton's lecturing engagements becoming each year more numerous, has added something to the wife's duties, and when he is away en tour she watches his interests at home.

come so uneven that it is impossible to properly clean them. Pools of water, polluted with fragments of decaying vegetables, are also frequent; so much so, indeed, that the air is heavy with objectionable odors.

Palmer Cox has signed a contract with The Ladies' Home Journal, whereby his amusing little "Brownies," which he has made so marvelously successful in St. Nicholas and in his books, will hereafter belong exclusively to the Journal. Mr. Cox's contract begins with the first of an artirely new series of adventised to the comment of the property o Lamentations of The Enemies of Canada Editor World: Nothing shows more clearly the unpatriotic conduct, the deplorable meanness, of such Canadians as we hear in the newspapers and out of them, crying against their country on account of the census returns. The census does not amount to so much as we expected—it is short half a million, perhaps a million—and we thought it would be at least five and a half or six millions of people. Well, now, suppose it is millions of people. Well, now, suppose it is so—suppose we have only increased in population half a million in ten years—are we to despair of our country on that account? Have we not a healthy population, and bave we not during the past 10 years been free from war, pestilence and famine and enjoyed abundant happiness? Have we not this year all over the Dominion had abundant crops and health and happiness? What is all this lamentation about? If the rural counties have decreased, the towns and cities have increased in population, enterprise and ed in population, enterprise and beauty.

Look at the progress made in railroads within 10 years, in arts, in fairs and expositions of agriculture. Look at the progress made in literature, in religion and schools. Are these things to be forgotten? Is God to be mocked because we are not blessed in everything. But it is said the United States have increased twice as fast<sub>a</sub> and that we have thing. But it is said the United States have increased twice as fast, and that we have lost half a million or more of our population, who have gone there. Is it not a fact that the older States of the American Union have lost even more than we have? Maine, a State of the same number as we are, is ata standstill. So are Vermont, Connecticut and New Hampshire. Massachusetts, apart from our French-Canadian emigration there, would probably be likewise. Many parts of the States of Ohio, New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia and even Illinois are in the same position. They are retrograding. Why? Because their people have gone to Kansas, the Dakotas, Texas, California. Wyoming, Nebraska, Jowa, Minnesota, Nevada and Colorado.

Nebraska, Iowa, Minnesota, Nevada and Colorado.

But it is said because corruption is found out in Government circles at Ottawa and in Quebec, we are a corrupt people, and our Governments are sinks of iniquity! How long is it since corruption was found at Albany in the Legislature? Not long, we all know. In what state is the criminal law, the social law of marriage, in all the American States? Are there no abuses at Washington, and among the female clerks? Can we find such crimes and embezzlements in our country as take place in all the American States? No! No! What is the state of religion in the Anterican States? How are the Sabbath laws observed. We are infested in Canada (and in Toronto especially) with hordes of corrupt theatrical Americans coming amongst us. Look at our courts and the punishment of crimes with us and with them. Look at the suicides and their constant lynch laws everywhere. Do we want such things here?

It is true that hordes of ignorant Europeans swarm to the States and increase their population by millions. Do we want them here?

As to destitution, the American cities swarm with the destitute, overworked women, and the tenement houses are swarming with the poor much more than here. Now let the croakers at our census think of these things. Let them thank God (if it is possible to do so with their distorted and unpatriotic souls) for the thousands of blessings which He has showered upon them. We deplore dishonesty at Ottawa, at Quebec and at Toronto. We acknowledge that those gentrusted with Government superintendence are not what they should be. Let us reform such things, dismiss the dishonest, elect better men, but not rush into despair and run into the arms of a people who are not as good, as well governed or as happy as are we.

Toronto, Sept. 1. CHARLES DURAND.

Criticism of the Great Enjoiner.

Editor World: The ordinary student of mankind who had not had an opportunity of observing so peculiar and eccentric a specimen as Mr. E. A. Macdonald, would not unnuturally suppose that a gentleman who had so recently figured before the public in such an exceedingly unfavorable light, would have been willing, nay, anxious, to retire for a time into obscurity, with the comfortable certainty that the public, who have distinctcertainty that the public, who have distinctcertainty that the public, who have distinctly noted his course as a happily blended compound of blatant self-advertisement, meanest treachery, and grasping self-seeking, and who are a little tirred of seeing his name perpetually coupled with an injunction, a speculation, or a sheriff's sale, would make no very strenuous efforts to draw him forth; but Mr. Macdonald has the couple companylace impulses. In such commonplace impulses. In right lexicon there is no such word as his bright lexicon there is no such word asself-effacement, and the readers of the morning and evening papers of the lst, whom he must by this time find it very hard to surprise, were genuinely startled at meeting him once more in the most unsuitable disguise he has yet assumed, that of an earnest, high-souled Christian, a pillar of the church, cruelly maligrand by enemies. As Mr. Macdonald would appear from his letters to be so morally constituted as to be able to look cruelly maligrad by enemies. As Mr. Macdonald would appear from his letters to be so morally constituted as to be able to look back upon his late achievements with a conscience void of offence, it may not be out of place to offer for his contemplation a short resume of the last few weeks so far as they concern him. His first appearance in the street railway matter was in his favorite role of the public-spirited citizen, armed with an injunction and a great deal of hazy hearsay evidence, tending principally to show that someone had been pulling his leg. But Mr. Macdonald's public spirit, like that of many others, was negotiable, and he rated his at the somewhat fancy price of $4500, which an intimate friend, with more zeal than discretion, paid him for silence. It might be supposed that Mr. Macdonald, after the performance of a brief farce on titled, "A new way to pay old debts," would have been content to pocket the profits of his public spirit and hold his tongue, but while appears to have satisfactorily accomplished the former, the latter did not suit his purpose, and after blazoning the fact that he had been bought off, he proceeded to get another intimate friend to photogriph the check, as evidence, he next offered his services to the company, in view of other large pecuniary obligations, did not feel justified in engaging so talented a gentleman and, finally, after instituting several *addenious actions for libel for the protection of his reputation, which stands sauly in need of
