

will realize more of that blessedness of which the Lord said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive," and feel something, too, of what must have passed through the bosom of her who heard the sweet approving words of her gracious Lord, (while some murmured and found fault)—"She hath done what she could." "Verily I say unto you, wheresoever this gospel is preached in the whole world, there shall also this that this woman hath done be told for a memorial of her."

Ah! what is money, or station, or influence, or the world's approbation, compared with the sympathizing love of Christ made known to those who labour and deny themselves for his sake; and very soon, assuredly, the day will come, when the believer's lament will be that he did not give up more and do more for Christ, and especially in the highest region of benevolence, which has regard to the soul and to eternity.

I remain, ever affectionately yours,

JOSEPH KINGSMILL.
