CATHOLIC CLUB MOCK PARLIAMENT.

The first session of the mock parliament in connection with the Catholic Club was held Nov. 27th under circumstances which promise that this feature of the club work is one that will interest a very large proportion of the members, their relatives and numerous friends. and will prove an unqualified success. The membership has for this purpose been divided into two parties, the populists and the aristocrats, with the populists in power. Mr. J. E. O'Connor has accepted the onerous position of first minister in the government, and has surrounded himself with an able body of lieutenants filling the regular portfolios and supported by a good majority of the members of the house. The aristocrats are led by Mr. Murray, who has in his ranks an energetic and able following, well capable of providing a powerful and telling opposition.

When the members were called to order by Clerk of the House, W. D. Dalton, the spacious hall of the club was well filled, the government side being somewhat the strongest in numbers. On motion of the Prime Minister, seconded by acting leader of the opposition, Mr. A. H. Kennedy, the President of the Club, Mr. F.W. Russell, was unanimously generous and devoted friends for the elected speaker of the house, and after important help they gave towards the he had gracefully acknowledged the honor, and had explained some of the

His Excellency the Governor-General, Mr. T. D. Deegan, entered the hall and graciously delivered the speech from the throne. The programme foreshadowed in the speech indicates that the government intend to bring in measures for the adjustment of the incidence of taxation to insure all classes of the people contributing their share according to their means to the expense of government, to curb the trusts and control monopolies; to reform the Senate, and to promote government ownership of all public utilities.

The address in reply to the speech was moved by Mr. J. Coyle, seconded by Mr. T. O'Callagan, each of whom made most creditable speeches, advancing their arguments and supporting the government side of the case in a way that would have daily Mass that acquaintances used to done credit to much older and more experienced public speakers.

Mr. Fred Marrin opened the case for the opposition, scoring many strong she had been kept in the house only points for his side, and eliciting the warm applause of his aristocratic friends as he scored the government for their radical and dangerous propositions. He moved resignation. She breathed her last on an amendment to the address which was the morning of November 30, at the seconded by Mr. Leo Russell, the age of 31. youngest member of the House, who in a concise but pointed speech held that the propositions of the government should be resisted by all patriotic citizens.

Mr. J. A. Barrie followed for the government with a well-considered and clever speech, in which he refuted the argument of the opposition, and showed that the government's policy was well calculated to carry the country forward in, her high road to prosperity and general contentment.

Mr. H. Cottingham came next with a ment and all its works.

Mr. W. I. Donovan then cudgels for the government, and Mr. A. There were also some floral tributes Kennedy spoke eloquently and to the from less intimate friends. The pall point for the Opposition.

Mr. C. W. O. Lane moved the adjournment of the debate, and the meeting of the House was then adjourned until next Tuesday evening. Before closing the Rev. Father Frigon, briefly addressed the members, giving them some good advice on the art of public speaking, and heartily congratulated all concerned on the good beginning that had been made.

Hon. Mr. O'Connor, president of the council, and minister of justice, has selected a galaxy of erudite and most able men for his cabinet. The portfolios have been assigned as follows: Secretary of war, Daniel Coyle; minister of finance, C. W. O. Lane; minister of the interior O. Marrin; minister of railways and public works, W. J. Donovan; minister of militia and defence, W. Bawlf; minister of customs, Dr. McKenty; minister of marine and fisheries, J. A. Barry; postmaster-general, Harry Wallace. Frank W. Obituary

Mr. C. J. O'TOOLE

Death is robbed of all its terrors for the dying and of half its sorrow for the living when it releases a young and fervent soul. The relatives and friends left behind ever keep the dear departed one in memory as radiant with youth and they feel great hope that that youth will never end. So it is with the late Mrs. C. J. O'Toole and her nearest and dearest. So regular was she at timee their departure for business by seeing her returning from St. Mary's. Though in delicate health for some time three days. Rev. Mr. Shannon believed the train Price $5 net, to accompany each order, to be close at hand.
