Dear Mr Macmillan

I write this note of thanks for the courtesy of a short interview you gave me this morning regarding the letter of Sir Arthur Currie dated Nov 3. in which he practically repudiates the arrangement he and other members of the College made with me for the production of your book.

It was understood that the copies ordered from me were largely meant for presentation to other Universities, Schools & the Press. I am blamed for not sending 1500 in one installment that would have been a physical impossibility & I never undertook to do this. I did, however, thank to Mr. Murray Gibson - dispatched 100 copies on Oct 11. from which orders could have
