

the soul having become the very expression of the Christ, "Not as I will, but as Thou wilt." His meat was to do the will of Him that sent Him to finish His work. Work may at times seem difficult before we reach it, but when it is undertaken and prosecuted it is delightful and a source of great blessing. The experience of the soul will always be clear, definite and powerful. The full assurance of understanding having been attained the soul soars and triumphs, knowing that God is working within, to will and to do of His own good pleasure, the last hindrance having been removed.

"Thy will be done, in Thine own way,
We will submit, keep Thou, we stray,
We yield, we work, we sink, we die,
Thy name be praised, on earth, on high.
