

railroad. But the same has been shown with respect to the Upper Fraser and the Bute Inlet valley, through the Cascade range. It is therefore clearly demonstrated, that these passes, which connect naturally with each other, offer the best and indeed the only really practicable line for a railway to the Pacific through British Columbia.

ALFRED WADDINGTON.

Victoria, V. I., June 7th, 1867.