DEPARTMENT HEADS WILL NO LONGER BE MERE LAY FIGURES

Civic Boards This Week Will Discuss Question of Giving More Power to the Salaried Heads of the Departments --Plan Will Mean Less Talk and More Work.

The common council will meet in monthly sessions on Monday afternoon next, and the various board meetings will be held this week.

This afternoon the safety board will be in session.

Tuesday afternoon the board of works will meet. On Wednesday the water and sewerage board meeting will be held, and on Thursday the treasury board will convene.

It is the intention to discuss at the various meetings the advisability of giving more power to the heads of departments. In this way much of the delay that is now considered by the aldermen to be done by the different expert committees. The ferry committee have already recommended that the power of appointment, suspension and dismissal of employees should be vested in the expert and the other departments of civic work will probably recommend the same action with reference to their staff.

One of the aldermen speaking of the matter today, said this action should have been taken long ago, as it would do away with a lot of unnecessary discussions in committee meetings, and would reduce the routine work that more attention could be given to important matters. He also thought that it was less of this kind of work that the duties of the aldermen would be so reduced, that it is signed and handed over to a business man to run for civic honors, as the time necessary to attend to the affairs of the council would be considerably less than under present conditions.

RENFORTH TO HAVE A STORE

Harold Thomas Will Conduct an Up-to-date Grocery There This Summer.

One of the few disadvantages of living in the country during the summer months is the trouble and work of getting provisions to feed the hungry mouths. Herebefore it has been the custom of the suburbanites to have their supplies sent out on the trains, which is all very well in its way, but it entails the necessity of juggling or hauling large bundles or boxes, sometimes about a 1/2 mile from the railway station. It will therefore be good news to the summer residents of Renforth, that a pretty little suburban villa on the banks of the Kennebecasis, along the I. C. R. line, that during the coming summer they need have none of the worry and work that has been necessary in the past seasons, for one of the residents, Harold Thomas, who was for so long in the employ of Armstrong and Machum has decided to put up a store near his present dwelling where everything that is usually kept in a first-class grocery will be offered for sale. Mr. Thomas intends to keep a complete stock of groceries, confectionery and provisions and will have a delivery team, so that goods can be sent to the various residents of the vicinity doing away with the troubles that have been experienced in the past. Under the new arrangement Mr. Thomas will send around to the houses of his patrons every morning for their orders and will deliver goods promptly, so that the cooking that formerly had to be done after the noon train arrived with the materials for the dinner finished up in the morning. This move will no doubt be greatly appreciated by those who spend the summer months in this section of the county.

Mr. Thomas is reported to be very much improved today and a speedy recovery is looked for.

SELFISHNESS AND SACRIFICE

Their Relation to Human Life and its Problems an age Long Struggle.

The largest congregation seen in Brunswick street Baptist church for years was that which joined in last evening's service.

The message which the pastor, the Rev. A. B. Colver, delivered with the forcefulness which is so strongly characteristic of his preaching, was based on the text: "Behold, I stand at the door and knock."

He pointed out that the saving of Jesus was characteristic of One who recognized in every man a son of God. He did not attempt to thrust Himself into the heart of a man and break down his personality, but appealed to that good which he knew existed in every human soul. Jesus was the incarnation of love and sacrifice, as opposed to selfishness and hate in the world. He thought of men as those who needed help and were not getting it. If life were only a struggle between educated beings for prizes such as wealth, the life of Jesus would be counted a failure. But He knew and we know that life has a deeper meaning and significance. The struggle between love and hate, between sacrifice and selfishness, is not ended. Jesus still stands and knocks at the door of the human heart. His message is in the pinched face of every human being, the misery of the drunkard's wife, in the haggard looks of the underpaid workman, in the pain and woe of the child. Yes, it was not the helpless ones who got no help that most concerned Jesus. It was the hate and selfishness that made men do things that were not for their own good. And that is the problem today. Jesus, looking down from Coesara, Philipp, where He was safe, to Jerusalem where death on the cross awaited Him, foresaw the doom and went dazedly where the love incarnate in Him pointed the way. And they who were to follow Him were not invited to take up their cushioned seats, but the cross.

"Dare you follow Him?" asked the preacher. Jesus, he asserted, never asked a man "to save his own precious soul." Only a devil of selfishness would do that. Jesus told men to go and save the souls of others, at whatever sacrifice, for in such a cause "that lost his life should find it."

Adding pointedly to conditions that exist in St. John today, the speaker emphasized the fact that the age-long struggle between love and hate, sacrifice and selfishness is still waged in the world, and that the love that Jesus thought of, in the highest sense, live.

WAITING FOR AGREEMENT

H. R. McLellan says Mowry Nut Co. Will Go Ahead With Factory When He Gets It.

H. R. McLellan of the Mowry Nut Company was asked by the Times this morning if the amended agreement, as prepared by the committee of aldermen, was satisfactory to him.

"It is satisfactory so far as I know," he replied, "but it is not signed yet. It is signed and handed over to me, but I do not feel altogether satisfied."

"It was all right the last time I saw it, but there may have been changes since then, for all I know."

Asked if he had received any intimation as to when he might expect to receive it, he said he had not.

"It is in the hands of the recorder, I understand. He will have to engross it and have it signed by the mayor and common clerk, I presume."

The reporter asked if it were true that Architect Brodie was preparing plans for the company's buildings, but Mr. McLellan said he was waiting for the agreement to be made before he would do anything.

"I am sure of where they stood in the matter," he said. "The agreement is in my hands and I am prepared to go ahead with the work," he added.
