

remarks however on this subject, without taking a glance at some of the other streets in the city, many of which are well worthy of notice, such as Parliament-street, at the head of which stands St. James's Cemetery, and a little to the east the Toronto Necropolis, another cemetery. The large plot of ground known as "the North Park," is situated in this direction, and extends from the cemetery on the east of Parliament-street south to King-street, thence east to the Don-bridge, and then north along the Don river to the Necropolis; and though not equal in appearance to St. James's or Hyde Park in London, or the Phoenix in Dublin, boasts of a Regent and St. James's-street. Palace-street runs east from the Market-square, towards the upper end of which the Jail is situated. The principal private residences on this street are those of the Honourable Christopher Widmer and the cottage of Enoch Turner, Esq., which, with their tastefully laid out grounds, have a handsome appearance. We must not omit to mention Wellington-street, at the eastern extremity of which (corner of Church-street) stands an hotel of the same name. The Post Office, Commercial Bank, Western Hotel, the Marriage License Office, and the Loretto Nunnery are likewise situated on this street. Towards the west end there are some very good private dwellings; Holland House, the residence of the Hon. Henry John Boulton, the neat residence of George Monro, Esq., and the recently erected substantial residence of William Wakefield, Esq., being the most deserving of notice. Wellington-place, is a wide and handsome thoroughfare running from Brock to Portland-street, in the western portion of the city: the Commissariat Office and some good private residences are situated on it. Adelaide and Richmond-streets (which are divided into east and west) are long and populous streets. On Richmond-street west is situated the Richmond-street Methodist chapel and United Secession church, and the Provincial Lying-in Hospital and Vaccine establishment. Beverly House, the residence of the Hon. Chief Justice Robinson is near its western extremity. The only building of a public character on the eastern portion of this street is the Toronto Dispensary and Lying-in-Hospital. The Congregational Church is situated on Adelaide-street, corner of Bay, and the Adelaide-street Wesleyan Methodist chapel on its eastern section; a little to the south of which, on Toronto-street, is the newly-erected Registry Office for the County of York. Bay and York-streets are each worthy of notice; the ranges of buildings erected on that portion of Bay-street lying south of King-street, for uniformity and extent, are certainly second to none in the city. The Primitive Methodist Church is situated on Bay-street. Immediately north of King-street, a little in the rear, is the Apostolic Church; contiguous to which, with questionable taste, a racket-court has been erected. The Fireman's Hall No. 2, completes the public buildings on this street. On York-street, the principal buildings are the Club House, corner of King-street, and Albany Chambers opposite. "The Cottage," the residence of James M. Strachan, Esq., at the foot of the street, is a pretty and tasteful residence. This street affords a good view of the front of Osgoode Hall.

Toronto has also her squares. St. George's-square, on which St. George's church is situated, the spire of which is much admired on account of its chaste simplicity and harmony of proportion: "The Grange," the handsome residence of Mrs. D'Arcy Boulton, and of her son, Wm. H. Boulton, Esq., M.P.P., may be said to bound it on the north; to the west of which, approached by a semicircular road, is the fine range of
