was not customary for a member to take part in the formation of a committee under a bill of which he did not approve, but the military service bill was of such importance that, whether he approved of it or not, it had now become law and it behooved all subjects of the king to see that the law was carried out. Reminding the house that on the opposition side of the house there were members who both approved and disapproved of the measure, he said he would consult with them, and then communicate with the prime minister.

When the item of $8,000,000 for the Hudson Bay Railway was reached, Hon. Wm. Pugsley remarked that he doubted very much if in times of war, these especially, it was desirable to engage in this expenditure. He claimed there was no immediate necessity for continuing this work at the present time.

During concurrence in the estimates of the department of public works, Mr. Pugsley made enquiry as to the improvements at Courtenay Bay, St. John (N. B.) He said he understood that the work had been stopped and the deposit returned to the contractors. Promises made by the minister of finance in regard to this project had not been realized, he said.

STORY OF SHOOTING

Hon. J. D. Reid, in reply, said, that about 18 months ago when he was acting minister of public works he had taken minister of public works he had taken this matter up with Mr. Hunter, the deputy minister, who had made a report showing the number of buildings suitable for office purposes. Practically all of these buildings are now occupied by government employes. There had been, he said, a remarkable increase in the space required for public offices since the war. He promised to make a detailed statement at a later date.
