CLOSING COTTON LETTER.

By direct private wires to J. C. Mackintosh & Co., St. John, N. B.

The aftermath of the government crop report served rather to intensify popular bullish sentiment in speculative circles, and while prices have risen rather laboriously, all things considered, each day just now appears to add a little to the hopes of the staple. Liverpool this morning reported sales of 432,000 bales of spots over the three days holidays here, with futures at the time of our opening from 10 to 12 English points above a parity with our Friday's closing. Our market at no time gave full response to the strength of the foreign market, but initial prices were 14 points higher, and the latter session witnessed a further improvement of about 4 points. At the higher level there was liberal realizing of profits by last week's buyers under which the leading options reached about 10 points, only to meet renewed aggressive buying, apparently for New Orleans account, which sent prices up to a range above 16 points above Friday's closing. The big spot interests were obviously a little more timid in their operations in view of the apparently increasing foreign demand for the staple. Nevertheless, there was a sharp speculative contest throughout the session in which the bull element appears to have come off victoriously. The census bureau report of the amount of cotton picked to September 1 will be published tomorrow. Current estimates place the amount at 200,000, which is by no means a small figure, based on popular estimates of the size of the current crop. If spinning interests continue to take cotton at the present rate higher prices are easily possible, but 12 1/2 cents would appear to place a natural ceiling upon this demand to merely hand to mouth needs.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, N. Y., Sept. 7.—Cotton—Spot closed quiet, 15 points higher; middling uplands, 13 1/2; middling gulf, 13 1/2. Sales, 400 bales.

HARRIMAN'S ILLNESS IS AGAIN FELT

(By Associated Press.)

New York, N. Y., Sept. 7.—E. H. Harriman's illness again sent a shiver through the world's securities markets today and broke a wide range of prices on the New York Stock Exchange. The violence of the decline in prices here was much aggravated by the fact that rumors were current here that the great financier had actually passed away. These reports were circulated both in London and New York. Their harmful influence was not dissipated by the early quoted assertions of Mr. Harriman's official associates that they understood he was better after an attack of indigestion. The lack of formal official announcement of the subject after last week's assurance that changes would be reported to the press, left an impression of a lack of candor in the advice that he was allowed to become public and left the speculative sentiment fearful and hesitating. It was this feeling that kept the market nervous and depressed in spite of the light weight of the selling orders that had been taken care of. It was a fact that selling was not notably large even on the demoralized opening break in prices. The demand was very little, however, to support prices even at the comparatively scanty selling. The bears were timid about making short sales, having in mind their severe experience on Monday of last week. In pointing out the number of times that reports of Mr. Harriman's danger and even of his actual death have figured in the recent stock market speculation, the question was advanced whether much was left in the way of effect on prices on such an event to be provided against. It was considered certain also, in the view of the vast interest in the stock market, that the business procedure that would be used in such contingencies, that the utmost precautions had been taken already to meet a sudden emergency, both in the administrative and financial affairs of the Harriman companies themselves and in the more sensitive organization of the speculative markets. The action of the market today gave sufficient testimony to the measures taken to support prices and resist the decline in its precipitate stages. The week closing at the lowest price the day was accompanied by reiterated bulletins affirming the low vitality of Mr. Harriman and the great anxiety by his family and friends. The stock market yesterday, however, had just declared the lack of any definite settlement of its views on the problem confronting it.

Bonds were irregular. Total sales, per value, $2,924,000.

United States bonds were unchanged on call.
