During east winds it was blown steadily across the lake in a long irregular line.

Being under full sail, the momentum acquired in coming down the steep slope carried him nearly across the landing stage, when, seeing a boat about ten feet from it, he shook out another reaf, made an astonishing spurt and jumped.

Just as he reached the deck the potato bag shifted heavily to port and laid out a clerk who was smoking a cigar through a meerochant in the waistband, shuttling him up like a knife, and Pat himself assured an involuntary devotional attitude.

He was the first to recover his perpendicularity and, as he replaced the bag in its normal position, he complacently remarked:
