McPhail, aged 18, son of James McPhail, of Whyococomagh, C B., died at the hospital to-day of accidental gas polsoning. He was found unconscious in his room at 1,038 Washington Street, early Sunday morning. The room was filled with illuminating gas which came from a partly turned jet. A window had been left partly open for ventilation and, had it not been for this fact, it is thought that Mr. McPhail would have died before he was discovered. At the hospital before his death he did not recover consciousness.
