Not only are there the duties of the state to its citizens -- but there are the duties of the citizen to the state.

The liberty of the subject -- is possible -- only within the security of the nation.

Personal liberties are the treasured nurslings of Liberalism.

But national security -- the security of the nation -- against aggression -- against sabotage -- against treason -- these are sacred trusts indeed.

It was for these -- that our gallant youth fought on the seven seas -- on distant battlefields -- and amid the scudding clouds.
