the same moment whether the bar

"Open the door, you scoundrel, the terrific reply, "if there be further delay, we'll break it in and hang you up to one of the bacon

It's the sodgers—the Lord pre whispered Morris to him-"I'm done for at last !- Eyeb 'tis over with me!'

Again, the knocking was loud and reiterated, his limbs trembled beneath him, and the cold drops of perspiration burst out upon his fore-

This minute, your honor-this minute it'll be opened for you," he found power to articulate, after repeating which many times, fumbling with the locks and bolts. the heavy old fashioned door of the mansion turned upon its hinges, and allowed him to look out into the night.

By the pale light of the moon, he saw that the house was surrounded by a party of soldiers and police, and before he had time for even a conjecture, as to their object, the chief constable had entered and was at his side.

"Couldn't you display a little more activity and readiness in your move ments, my fine fellow," exclaimed the I promise you this tardiness tells little in your favor.
"I don't know, your honor," returned Morris, scarcely comprehending him.

Oh you don't, don't you? tter. What is your name?" matter. My name-your honor!'

Yes, your name, sir-no harm I Eyeh, harm sir, why should there? sure there's no harm in what one was christened." Egad I don't know that either,' returned the chief, "many a man was hanged on account of his name, I can tell you, come sir, what are you bring in the hand-cuffs. The person addressed, attended by another policeman, immediately entered, and seizing Morris by both arms, had his wrists locked together in a few moments.

Morris Moran, your honor.' Morris, hey, Morris Moran! Ah ha! my little hero. Have we nabbed you at last? All's right here, Copely," he continued, addressing one of the party outside, in a louder voice:

Gently, Copely-gently," said the chief, with affected compassion while the operation was going forward, pay all due respect to the captain no noise captain, no exclamations if you please—no necessity for disturbing the family—you would not wish to have them distressed by acquainting them with the loss they are about to sustain - move on Copely."

In compliance with the order, Morris was pushed forward by the police, and immediately surrounded by the soldiery; the officer followed, the of Kilgobbin house closing heavily after him.

The unfortunate prisoner moved along in the centre of the party with tottering step and bewildered brain, almost doubting whether he was yet awake, or whether the events of the last half hour did not form some extraordinary part of the hideous dream which preceded it. As he advanced. however, the realities of his situa tion became more apparent. He felt the chill night wind about him, and the hard road beneath his feet. He saw the bayonets bristling before and beside him, and he heard his name repeatedly mentioned by some one in his rere, who seemed to be giving an account of a bloody encounter, in which he seemed to occupy a distinguished position. He was often startled, too, when the road chanced to wind through a dark glen or plantation, by the sudden voice of the chief from behind— 'Hilloo—sergeant—look to your prisoner. Arrived at the military station at Ballincally, he was handed over to the officer of the guard, and com-mitted to a little room with a strongly barred window. But of all that occurred to him during the night, nothing astounded him so thoroughly as the charge he heard given respecting his safe keeping by the chief of police to the latter, as he was departing. He heard himself described as a most notorious and desperate char acter, who, if the greatest vigilance and activity were not enforced, would assuredly on the first opportunity baffle the guards and effect his escape to the mountains. He passed two or three hours in this solitary room, listening to the slow step of the sentry as he paced back and forward before the door. The more he reflected upon the circumstances of his arrest, the less was he able to form any satisfactory conjecture on the subject. He might perhaps have been suspected of some participation in the late murder at Clondegad, if he had not been, for-tunately for himself, driving his mistress to Mass, and seen by hundreds of people in the chapel-yard at the very time the fatal conflict was going on. It seemed altogether like some unaccountable fatality, bearing no relation to the past circumstances of his life, but coming upon him as a doom in his hour of hope and security. It was now long past midnight, the moon had gone down, and the wind was blowing in fitful gusts, ac companied by heavy drops of rain, which beat against the window panes. As Morris listened in melancholy as Morris Instelled III Interaction mood to its dreary pattering, he heard the tramp of horses rapidly approaching, and in a few moments after a mounted patrol rode up. On demanding the report of the night, Morris, who caught every sound that fell with a painful acuteness, heard the officer of the guard, to whose care he was committed, saying in an elated tone, "Egad! Edwards and his party have made a noble night's work of it; they arrested the princi pal in Robinson's murder, the celebrated Terryalt—Captain Morris Moran' at Kilgobben, not three hours ago, and we have him fast within."

"Capital! by Jupiter," ejaculated the patrol, "what sort of a fellow is

"Oh, a bold fellow, I promise you He's low-sized, but hard and wiry ooking. 'Tis unknown, I'm told, all the men he killed, or the jails he broke through during the last half

'Aye-aye-sharp's the word then -keep a good look out, and we'll have him to Ennis in the morninga good night." Saying which the speaker touched his horse with the spurs, and followed by his party, rode off at a rapid pace.

TO BE CONTINUED

THE MERCIES OF THE LORD

A TRUE STORY By Rev. Richard W. Alexander

The Mercies of the Lord! No won der the Psalmist broke forth into rapturous song when he thought of Mercies of the Lord! And who better than a priest of God can echo from his heart of hearts the voice of the Psalmist. I was on the streets of New York on my way to visit a poor consump-tive, whom I frequently attended. My mind was distracted, and I did not notice until I was in the middle of the block that I had taken the wrong street. I kept on, however, thinking I would make it right when I turned the next corner. Suddenly a little girl ran hurriedly across th street, and said to me excitedly :

Are you a priest, Sir?' "I am," I said, "what can I do for you ?"

"Why, Father there's a man dying in a stable over there, and they think he's a Catholic."

'Show me at once," I said, and quickly followed the little messenger to a back street, where, in a stable, sure enough, lay a young man apparently dying. He was conscious, and a Catholic, I soon found out, and although he could not speak distinctly I made out sufficiently to be able to give him absolution, and as I knelt at his side, I anointed him.

In a great city like New York we nearly always carry the holy oils with us when we go out of doors and this time, anyhow, I was on my way to a sick call. I got through, and had scarcely paused for a minute when the policeman who had come over at my call, and the little crowd that had gathered, watching, said : "He's dying!" and in fact he was. Hardly five minutes passed, until that poor young man, unknown to me, met under such strange circumstances, and in such a strange place had passed into the presence of God —with his sins absolved, with the great Sacrament of Extreme Unction to console his agony, and the prayers of the Church the last sound on his mortal ear. There was a hush over the motley group—not a word was said. Death, the great leveller, was there, and ever one recognized him. "Do you know his name?" I said to the officer in a low voice "I think he is poor So-and-So" was the reply.

I took out my card and wrote on the back of it :

"I have given absolution and anointed this man, whose name I learn is Soand-So, on such a date, before his death," and I signed my name.

"Officer." I said. "take this and find out something about him. and, if possible give this to his people.

The officer touched his can, and made my way out. I went on my sick call, no longer wondering why had gone to the wrong street. A soul was to be saved! and God's Arms were stretched out to it. But this was not all.

Two days after, I was out again. and on my return home, as I passed the parlor and the door was open, I heard weeping, and looking up saw two women dressed in mourning talking to one of the Fathers. I passed on to my room, and almost immediately was followed by the Father who had seen me passing. "That is a sad case downstairs," he aid to me.

"What is it?" I queried.

"Why in the parlor are the mother and sister of a poor fellow who was brought home dead. The family is in the next parish, good practical Catholics, but the young fellow was wild and dissipated, and, as he had not been to the Sacraments for some years, the parish priest refuses to give him Christian burial. These poor women are broken-hearted, but what can be done? Their name is

So-and-So."
"What!" I exclaimed, "go right down and tell them I gave absolution and Extreme Unction to that young man myself, before he died!"

"You—You did?" said the amazed

"I did, and through the mercy of God his soul is saved! Go down and comfort their hearts. 1 will follow."

He went like a flash. And when I followed I found mother and sister and the Father in a state of joy and amazement. I told my experience, which was sustained on their return home by the card that was given by the police officer. The parish priest at once signified his change of mind, and the poor fellow was buried like a Christian with Holy Mass and the final absolution, instead of being placed in an excommunicate's grave. God's mercy is surely infinite, for where else did that poor fellow get the grace of his Christian death but from the unsought grace of my straying out of my way

LORD ACTON'S LETTERS

M. J. GRIFFIN, PARLIAMENTARY LIBRARIAN IN TORONTO STAR

The republication of Lord Actor's Letters comes to us by way of surprise. When they were first printed there was a disposition among many people to make protest. A distinguished English public man said to the present writer: "The volume is a mere bookseller's speculation.'

That Miss Gladstone should have so far betrayed confidence as to give to the public a long series of letters not intended, obviously, for publication, was remarkable. There was so much in these letters that Lord Acton would have repudiated in his later days, had he been consulted, that it was universally recognized as a blunder to publish them.

There was so much personal criticism, so many somewhat wild guesses, such an entire absence of prudence—in the letters, that they eally discredited the reputation for ability and omniscience which Lord Acton had won. Full of epigrams and quaint comment and uncommon earning, they nevertheless left on the mind of a careful reader the im pression of illogical surprise which one gets in Alice in Wonderland It was the Mad Hatter not the Professor of History who was writing.

The volume has now been reprinted second time. Why, we are unable to determine. It is not called a second edition; no notice of the new reprinting is taken; Mr. Herbert Paul, who edited the first edition, affords no light on the reason for the new edi tion, and no notes are given to indi-cate the cause. There are some twenty-five pages of new letters put on at the end of the volume; that is all We suspect that the reason for the new issue is to make the Letters uniform in type, paper, and form with the volumes of Essays and Lectures which have been published, very much to the advantage of the world of scholarship. This is no doubt, an excellent reason; but why we are not informed of the object we are unable to understand.

There is not, we are disposed to think, anything in the new letters to justify the new publication. ther, we are disposed to think that there are things in them which should have forbidden publicity. Common respect for the feelings of living men eminence is absent on this occa sion. We find ourselves murmuring

Proclaim the faults he would not show

Break lock and seal: betray the trust : Keep nothing sacred; 'tis but just many-headed beast should

When Lord Acton is made to say that in regard to Home Rule and Liberal policy "John Morley's importance is excesssive," we are disposed to think that Lord Acton would resent the publicity and Lord Morley has the right to resent it. Even in 1886 Mr. John Morley was a man of commanding influence, ability, and The biographer of Mr. Gladstone ought to have been re spected by Mr. Gladstone's family. Again, we are compelled to read

Lord Acton's remarks on Mr. Morley in 1887: "He sees nothing in poli doubt some such case might be made out against Lord Morley; but why should a whole volume be reprinted in order to make out the case? Lord Acton would never have consented to publish such letters. There is a letter of February 18th, 1888, which contains an account of Sir Henry Maine's death in Paris:

"We have all combined to conceal from (Lady Maine when she arrived) that Maine's splendid mind was bethrough Miss Gladstone's indiscreet publication. Was it worth publish-

Again, in 1891, apropos of Lord Rosebery's life of William Pitt, in which Acton says "all the essentials of the Conservative cause" are admitted, he goes on to say: "When all this is written by Rosebery and edited by Morley, one asks oneself for what sufficient reason then they are not (Tory) Secretaries of State ? Probably both could supply the same reply, viz., that Pitt was never quite a Tory, but was adopted by the Tories as carrying out a national policy opposed ty Fox's radicalism.

In 1896 (Dec. 23rd) Lord Acton writes: "I am sorry that Morley will not write either of the Gladstonian Chapters—(in the Cambridge Modern history). Luckily this book on Home Rule is coming out and

ODD LOTS FOR PROMPT DISPOSAL

Particulars on request.

A. E. AMES & CO. TORONTO MONTREAL

Takes Dutch the Cleanser hard work out of Many other uses and full directions on large sifter can IA will tell (most of) what he knows and we shall go on painting on his such material as we canvas with possess." There are other references to this proposed book, which we are told was actually in print at the

SCRUB

WORK

Now if Lord Morley had a book on Home Rule ready in 1896, three years after the failure of Mr. Glad stone's Second Bill, we must assume that he has suppressed it. That Lord Acton had knowledge of it was no doubt in confidence; that he wrote about it to Miss Gladstone was no doubt in confidence: and that the fact has been made public is without doubt a very grave indiscretion. Lord Morley was probably not consulted

In 1897 it appears that Mr. Gladstone placed, or was ready to place, all his confidential papers in Lord Acton's hands, so that he might write the Chapters on Home Rule and the Gladstone policies. Mr. Gladstone died in 1898. Lord Acton died in 1902. So two probably startling chapters in history have missed being published-Lord Acton's and Lord Morley's. Probably the world can get along without them; but the men were so sincere, that we have, after all, no doubt, lost some beautifully controversial pages.

SOCIALIST TACTICS AGAINST RELIGION

A PROGRAMME AIMING AT COM-PLETE OVERTHROW OF CHURCH

In a lecture delivered recently in Norwich under the auspices of the K. of C., Mr. David Goldstein, a convert from Judaism and also from Socialism, set forth in graphic style the diametrical differences between Christianity and Socialism. He began by pointing out the importance of his subject in this country at this time, when over a million people have expressed their favor of Socialistic doctrines. One hundred and fifty thousand are members of frater nal bodies for the spread of Socialist principles and 1,000,000 are members of a dues-paying organization to help propagate the faith. Socialists are found in the colleges of the country and in the schools where the teach ers of youth themselves are trained. Magazines are filled with articles of a Socialistic trend. As these principles are being spread broadcast about the country, it is necessary that the citizens become@acquainted with the truth in regard to the teachings. Touching upon Milwaukee's experience in Socialism, he claimed that the first winter in Milwaukee under tics but higher expediency and no Socialism saw the greatest number large principles. As there are, for of unemployed in the history of the him, no rights of God, there are no city. They raised the city budget above anything that had been known. rights of man—the consequence on above anything that had been known. above anything that had been known. They had complained of tyranny, but they were worse tyrants than any the city had known. They disregarded the civil service laws, and at the end of their term all they had to show was a public comfort station at a cost of $13,000.

Socialism, said the speaker, is not only an economic theory. It is a philosophy of life. It is so broad in its scope and so various in its phases that but one branch of the subject that Maine's splendid mind was going ginning to decay." There is no sign of decay of mind in anything that of decay of mind in anything that sub-division of the general subject of Socialism. The subject of Socialism. The subject of Socialism would be, "The Tactics his lecture would be, "The Tactics of Socialism as Related to Religion and the Family." The Socialist program is a complete overthrow of our present civic and ecclesiastical institutions. Leo XIII. pointed out with emphasis the fact that the Socialist doctrine is in direct conflict with the Catholic faith. No; only Leo XIII, but also the present Pope Pius X, in February, 1904, issued an encyclical warning members of the Church of the danger of the Socialist doctrines, The Pontiff went to the very root of the matter and proved the futility of reconciling Catholic faith and Social-ist principles. The Catholic who insists upon being a Socialist must go counter to the mandates of the Church itself.

The Catholic believes in God the Father Almighty, Creator of heaven and earth. He believes that God has revealed His will in the Ten Commandments. He believes that when Jesus said: "Thou art the rock on which I build My Church." He established the Church for all time. He believes in the sacraments and in the dogmas and doctrines of the Church, which are eternal and un

changeable. ANTAGONISTIC PRINCIPLES

Socialism, said the speaker, denies God, says that nothing is permanent, that all is changing. Karl Marx, the greatest Socialist, says that the materialist conception of atheism history, is the necessary foundation of scientific Socialism. The Catho lic, if he is a Socialist, must accept two wholly different doctrines. must serve both the Christ and the anti-Christ. Socialism says that our morals and religion are determined y the mode of producing the neces saries of life and that the co-opera ive commonwealth, which is cock sure to come, would cause them to

That the theory of materialist con ception of history is the theory ac-cepted by the Socialist party was indicated by quotations from the most prominent Socialists of the world, those who speak with authority in the councils of the party. No man, said Mr. Goldstein, can believe in the theory of economic determinism or historical materialism and believe in industrial conditions, they are etern-The Ten Commandments eternal and unchanging. The Catholic Church is a living refutation of the theory on which the Socialist's faith is based. The Catholic Church has endured during the three stages of production and its principles are the same as they have always been and as they will always remain. Socialists principles are correct, she should have been blotted out of existence long before now.

In the model age proposed by the ocialist, it will be a classless age and as morality is a matter of classes there will be no morality, the religious organizations will gradually disappear, and the churches with them. The Socialist tells us that all religion is servile, and Christianity the most servile of the servile. The Ten Commandments are to die out under a Socialistic age, because there will then be no private property against which these crimes can be com mitted.

The Socialist argues, however that religion is a matter for the individual and not for the party. The case of Ingersoll is cited as a prom inent Republican who was one of the world's greatest agnostics, and yet no one calls the Republican party a party of atheists. The speaker pointed out that the difference is that the Republican party has never endorsed agnostic writings of Ingersoll and called them the views of the party. On the other hand a man must accept Marx and Engel and Bebel and their theories or he is no Socialist, and all of these men are revered and honored by the party organizations as the men who wrote their doctrinal principles which pronounce atheism to be the bed rock loctrine of the Socialists' cause.

The lecturer attacked the assertion hat Socialism had nothing to do with matters of religious beliefs, in stancing the fact that all of the highest party leaders from Karl Marx down had been and are now atheists that one of the principles of the party is the materialist conception of history, that it denies and scoffs at revealed religion, and these latter ssertions were supported by copious quotations by the speaker from the vorks of Socialist writers and from the different organs and publica tions of the party. That "all stand-ard Socialist literature is against God, antagonistic to the Christian ideals and against Christ," the lecturer asserted, and convincingly argued that Socialism was against the family and that its teachings were that men and women should be free to love as they will, the intervention of the Church of State," that these relations should terminate at will, thus obviating the necessity of any woman being "dragged through the mire of the divorce courts."—Providence Visitor.

AN UNPREJUDICED TRIBUTE

The Booklover's Magazine pays this unprejudiced and sterling tribute to the Catholic Church. It is a common sense view often expressed by Americans. It remains that these same sentiments shall be expressed in terms of the heart and conscience : The growth of the Catholic Church

United States is one of the most striking facts of history she has also gained the popular good will, or at least a favourable session, and she has conquered re spect. At present those who look upon her most favourably are that large and influential class of whose antecedents were Protestants Christianity. The principles of the Christian faith do not change with Protestant church is little more than nominal. They know enough Protestantism to make them alive to its faults, and they know just enough of Catholicism to make them admire its excellence. These men care little for the theological and ecclesiastical questions which separate Rome and Protestantism. They are legislators, city officials railroad men, editors, managers of large business interests. Whenever their dealings bring them in contact with a Catho lic institution, they find an organization which knows its own mind knows what it wants, has some one who can speak for it officially and They can see that it maintains discipline among its own mem bers, and seems at the same time to retain their affection. They are at tracted, in a word, by its practical, business-like efficiency, and are re-pelled by the opposite qualities in Protestantism.

Eczema Sufferers

You Can Stop That Itch At Once

An eminent skin specialist has discovered a simple, pure, mild compound that is a positive cure for Eczema and all forms of skin disease. This wonderful remedy is called D.D.D. Prescription, and is a clean, pleasant liquid that is applied direct to the itching skin. The result is almost miraculous—the sufferer gets instant relief, and often a few applications are enough to take away the eruption, clear the skin and effect a complete cure.

The discovery of D.D.D. has proven to medical authorities how very useless it is to dose the stomach to cure skin disease. The disease is in the skin, and must be treated there.

"Doctor the Itch where the Itch is." This wonderful remedy is now being used in all parts of the Province by physicians and in hospitals. Thousands have been cured by it.

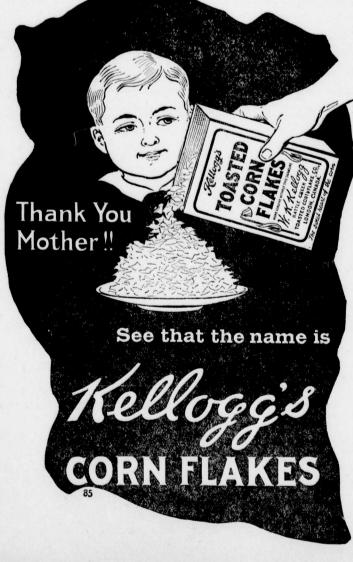

D.D.D. Prescription has proved invaluable not only for Eczema in all forms but also for Fsoriasis, Salt Rheum, and Tetter, Ulcers, Pimples, Dandruff and all Scalp Eruptions, Ring Worm and all skin diseases. Don't fail to keep D.D.D. Prescription on hand at all times.

D.D.D. is obtainable at all druggists at one dollar a bottle.

Trial Bottle Free

Send us your name and address, enclosing to cents to cover cost of postage and we will send you, free, a liberal sample bottle of this wonderful D.D.D. prescription — enough to prove that it will stop that itch instant.

D. D. Laboratories Dept..... 54 49 Colborne St., Toronto

AUTOMOBILES, LIVERIES, GARAGE

R. HUESTON & SONS
y and Garage. Open Day a
r Livery BonRichmond St. 380 V

BARRISTERS AND SOLICITORS

FRANK J. FOLEY BARRISTER-AT-LAW The Kent Building, Corner Yonge & Richmond Sta.

THE ONTARIO LOAN & DEBENTURE CO'Y Capital paid up, $1,750.000. Reserve $1,450.000 Deposits received, Debentures issued Real Estats Loans made, John McClary, Pres.; A. M. Smart, Mgr. Offices: Dundas St., Cor Market Lane, London

Music Taught Free

29 COMMON SENSE MFG. CO. 361 Queen St. W., - Toronto.

Home Instruction Special Offer to Our Readers

In order to advertise and introduce their home study music lessons in every locality the International Institute of Music of New York will give free to our readers a complete course of instruction for either Piano, Violin, Mandolin, Guitar, Organ, Banjo, Cello, Brass Instruments or Sight Singing. In return they simply ask that you recommend their Institute to your friends after you learn to play.

You may not know one note from another: yet, by their wonderfully simple and thorough method, you can soon learn to play. If you are an advanced player you will receive special instruction.

The lessons are sent weekly. They are so simple and easy that they are recommended to any person or little child who can read English. Photographs and drawings make everything plain. Under the Institute's free tuition offer you will be asked to pay only a very small amount (averaging 14 cents a week) to cover postage and the necessary sheet music.

No one should overlook this wonderful offer. Tell your friends about it—show this article to them.

The International Institute has successfully taught others and can successfully teach you, even if you know absolutely nothing whatever about music. The lessons make everything

Write to-day for the free booklet. which explains everything. It will convince you and cost you nothing. Address your letter or postal card to International Institute of Music. 98 Fifth Ave., Dept. 427C, New York

N. Y.

THIS MONEY-MAKING BOOK IS FREE

Tells of an Investment Safer and More Profitable Than Bank or Railroad Stock.

Endorsed by Leading Bankers Government Officials and the Catholic Hierarchy and Laity.

A valuable book of interest to and for circulation only among Catholics has just been issued, and will be sent free and postpaid to any reader of the CATHOLIC RECORD who has $20 or more to invest.

The book tells of a line of business that has and is paying enormous dividends, and which is being supported by Catholics to the extent of $75,000,000 a year. It contains most complete facts and figures relating to this particular business and the astonishing dividends paid stockholders. It shows how Catholics may, for the first time, now become stockholders and receive their share of the profits of this great business. The stock of old established companies in this line is worth ten to twenty times par value, and original investors are receiving 100 per cent. dividends.

This is not a get-rich-quick schemes but a high-class, legitimate business enterprise, indorsed by leading banks and the Catholic hierarchy and laity. This is the opportunity of a life time to make a safe and profitable investment, and worth the attention and investigation of every conservative investor.

If you would like to have a copy of this book, address Philip Harding, Dept. 614 V, Box 1301, Philadelphia,

Mr. Harding requests that no one write simply through idle curiosity and unless you are a member of the Catholic Church the book will be of no interest to you, because only Catholics will be permitted to hold stock in this particular institution.