The vendors of a well-known patent medicine saw in this an opportunity for a and useful advertisement, and they forthwith had similar sized bills underneath as follows: "Try Blank's Noted Pills"

This naturally annoyed the religionists, who at once ceased to be the medium of publicity in such a manner to the proprietary article. In time the original boards were washed away, but the advertisements of "Try Blank's Noted Pills" continued to appear.

The chance for revenge had now arrived, and in order to return a Roland for an Oliver, the Salvationists beneath every announcement displayed an attractive poster on which was printed, "Pre- pare to meet thy God!"

Alfred had hopes but Charlie had the This, of course, was unknown to Al- or he would never have proposed to

Naturally the girl said no, because it was not the summer time and two en- gagements at once would have been bad for her, and furthermore Alfred was not her

So she responded "No," and was about to say something else when Alfred held up his hands appealingly. "I beg of you," he pleaded, "not to say you will be a sister to me."

She drew herself up haughtily. "I had not intended doing so, she said mildly. "Charlie isn't very particular as to what kind of brothers-in-law he has, but we have to draw the line some- where."

From that moment Alfred was a changed being.

"Must I run these two scandals under one head?" asked the foreman.

"No, indeed," replied the thoughtful editor. "Run one on the sporting page and the other on the woman's page. Then the two heads of the family can divide the paper and keep peace between them."
