As had been predicted in England, the French have retaken Rheims, but this step is of greater moral than strategical value, for the line to the northeast of this town provides a better defensive position for the German forces than does the front marked by Rheims itself.

SURRENDER UF

According to advices received here from Berlin, the demand for news in Germany, where the people would appear to be growing impatient, has been soothed to a certain extent by the reassuring statement from the general staff that the German line is holding out successfully against the offen-sive movements of the allies. So far as the last 24 hours are concerned, this information agrees with news received in London, with the exception, however, of the German left wing. This part of the line, judging from des-patches made public in London, would appear not only to have withdrawn from the investment of Verdun, but by permitting the relief of Troyon, which is 12 miles Above is a group photograph, taken on board the steamship Cedric, of the Belgian Commission sent by King Albert to protest to President Wilson against alleged German atrocities in Belgium. The commission is made up of Henry Carton de Wiart, Minister of Justice of Belgium, who is its chief; Louis de Sadeleer, a Minister of State and leader of the government party; Paul Hymans, leader of the liberal (opposition) party, and also a Minister of State; Emile Vandervalde, a Minister of State and the leader of the socialist party, and the Count de Lichtervelde, who besides being a member of the commission is secretary to the Belgian Prime Minister. He is a son of the late Count Lichtervelde, who was Belgian Minister to the United States from 1897 to 1901.

Second Great Battle in Northern Part of France is Now Raging Fiercely

(BY SPECIAL WIRE TO THE COURIER)

LONDON, Sept. 16, 1.55 p.m.-The second great battle in northern France since the southbound army of the German invaders met its check is now apparently in progress to the northward of the River Aisne. The opposing lines are arrayed from the Argonne Hills through Rethel to Chateau-Porcien and near the practice camp of Sissonne, where the program of the French summer manoeuvres contemplated cavalry training on a large scale for this very date.

Whether the Germans propose a fight to a finish at this position or pin merely to cover their retreat to the River Meuse is not yet clear, but the German commanders are showing the same skill in retreat and the same skill in keeping their forces intact as the Allies showed a fortnight ago. The German rush into and out of France thus far has brought no decisive result, and until a pitched battle on a huge scale is fought and won neither side is in a position to claim that it has secured more than the opening move in the war game.

The Allies for the moment have retrieved their perilous position and have turned tables on the invaders, but the next move is with the Germans, whose armies are still in being and in great force on a ground more or less selected by themselves.

The debacle-for it seems nothing less-in the Austrian armies means that Germany will have more and more to rely mainly upon herself; hence there will be a greater interdependence of events in the eastern and western field of operations. What new forces Germany can put into the campaign in the western area must henceforth depend in a great measure upon how far she can neglect the Russian movement on Breslau, the capital of the Prussian province of Silesia, 100 miles southwest of Berlin.

Reports to-day say that Emperor William himself has gone to East Prussia to take chief command of the German armies opposing the Russian invaders. He may have gone there, but little credence is attached to the assertion that he proposes to take the active command out of the hands of a fighting general of the calibre of Von Hindenberg.

There is the usual diversity of stories to-day regarding the Austro-Servian operations. The Austrian general staff claims to have driven the Serbs out of the province of Banat and from the eastern district of Slavonia.

. The Servians, however, heretofore have shown a marked capacity for reappearing in the same or better positions after these defeats They now claim they are bombarding the Hungarian town of Orsova.

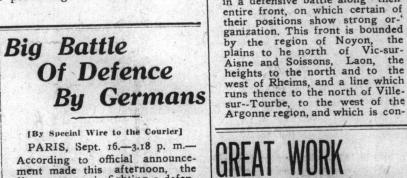

The war indemnities claimed by the German troops in towns traversed in Belgium and France reaches a total of $144,300,000. Only a very small percentage of this sum, however, has been paid.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT IS ISSUED AT PARIS

[By Special Wire to the Courler] PARIS, Sept. 16 .- The following official communication was made public here to-day:

"During the days of the 14th and the 15th of September, the rear guards of the enemy, with which our pursuit forces were in contact, were reinforced from the main body of the German army. 'The enemy is again engaging in a defensive battle along their entire front, on which certain of their positions show strong or-' ganization. This front is bounded by the region of Noyon, the plains to he north of Vic-sur-Aisne and Soissons, Laon, the heights to the north and to the west of Rheims, and a line which runs thence to the north of Ville-sur-Tourbe, to the west of the main body of the German army.
