MIDDLE-AGED MEN.—There are many troubled with too frequent evacuations of the bladder, often accompanied by a slight smarting or burning sensation, and weakening of the system in a manner the patient cannot account for. On examination of the urinary deposits a rosy sediment will often be found, and sometimes particles of albumen, and color of a thin milkish hue, again changing to a dark, torpid appearance. There are men who die of this difficultly ignorant of the cause, which is the second stage of seminal weakness. The doctors will guarantee a perfect cure in all such cases, and healthy restoration of the genito-urinary organs.

BOOK FREE.—Those unable to call should write for question list and book for home treatment. Thousands cured at home by correspondence. Our honest opinion always given, and good, honest, careful treatment given to every patient.

Battle Of Mammoths.

Indian Legend of a Mighty Contest
In Kentucky.

MAMMOTH BATTLE AT BIG BONE SPRINGS. Testaments were huge mammoths and mastodons on one side, lightning and the wrath of an Indian deity on the other. All that is left to tell the terrible story is the huge bones that have been excavated near Big Bone Springs, Boone county, Ky.

The story, as told by the old Indian chief, is a thrilling one. When General William Henry Harrison, grandfather of the present ex-President Harrison, had the Great Spirit rested while he shot his thunderbolts into the herds of mammoths. The bottom of the valley, now comparatively dry, was once a quagmire of blue clay and sulphur water, and it is here, within a radius of half a mile, that the great relics were found that gave to the town its name. And it is here that numberless strange bones of long dead and extinct animals still lie, not many feet below the soil.

Although there are signs which might point to this valley being discovered by the French long ago, the first known white man to penetrate to the spot was James Marshall, who came there in 1773. He found many bones of the mammoth and those also of strange smaller animals, a swamp some 100 acres square being live he made the framework of his tent with immense rib bones nine and ten feet long, which he picked up and drove into the earth. Marshall also found the traces of paths leading to the springs, which were probably made by extinct animals that sought them, attracted thither by the saltiness of the water.

Lightning Photographed. This photograph is the most remarkable ever taken, says the Boston Globe, for it shows a lightning flash which struck the foremast of the British ship Racer at midnight during one of the recent thunderstorms. The snap shot was taken at exactly the right moment and is a unique specimen of the photography of lightning flashes. The flash was carried off harmlessly by the lightning conductor that runs up the mast. The Racer was at the time lying at anchor in Dartmouth harbor, the hills and the shipping around standing out for a moment clearly defined in the glare of the lightning. The photograph is regarded by United States weather officials as the most interesting photograph extant of the heavenly artillery in action.

Madame and the Lobster. An amusing case came before the police in Paris when a dealer in fish was summoned by a Mme. Angelo, who claimed 30 francs damages for the injury caused to her nose by one of the defendant's lobsters.

The plaintiff had gone to the market, and, taking up a lobster from the stall, told it down again, saying it was not fresh. The fishwife protested that it was alive, madame to the contrary, so to satisfy herself the latter seized her nose so it, when the lobster applied hold of that organ and held it fast.

Mme. Angelo screamed for assistance, but the dealer and her companions were so overcome with laughter that it was some time before the nose of the lady could be released.

The fish woman, in her defense, said she was not to blame, as the mischief was caused by Mme. Angelo putting the lobster so near her face when she was told it was living. The law taking the same view of the case, the complaint was dismissed, the plaintiff to pay the costs.

Stray Stories.

PLEASANT PRISONS.

THE SPECIAL ONES IN THE ENGLISH PARLIAMENT.

They are intended Particularly For Members and Other Persons Who Violate Parliament's Own Dignity, Rules and Customs.

Few persons are aware that England's parliament has its own special prisons within its own precincts which are intended particularly for its own members and persons who violate its own dignity, rules and customs. Of course these prisons seldom are used now, but they have been in the past, and not so very long ago, and may be again. The house of commons has another set and the house of lords another.

The commons prison is a 3500 way up in the Clock Tower. Here are two sets of prisons, intended only for the accommodation of one prisoner each, one set being a little higher up in the tower than the other. Each set consists of a sitting room and two bedrooms, the former being a nice, comfortable room about three by five yards, with a neat carpet and chairs good enough for anybody. The extra bedroom is not intended for the prisoner or for any friends whom he might desire to put up for the night, but is the sleeping apartment of the official who looks after him during his incarceration. This man is usually the supervisor of badge messengers, and, besides looking after his man, he is also his servant for the time being, and waits upon him just like any other.

He never upon the question of the possibilities of the prisoner's escape, for the sergeant-at-arms is responsible, and inasmuch as the only way of getting to and from the prison is by way of this sergeant's house and through it, the risk of such a thing ever happening is practically prohibitive.

While he is there the prisoner really has a good time. No restrictions as to hours are placed upon him, and he may rouse himself from his slumbers just when he feels most inclined and return to them in the same way. Practically the only thing he cannot do is to walk about outside just as he pleases, but he is permitted to take an hour and a half's exercise each morning on the terrace of the house, and the terrace, broad and long and with its splendid outlook upon the river, is by no means a bad place to take exercise. If he were left entirely unguarded, the prisoner might dive into the river and swim away, or, what would be simpler, haul a passing boat. So, just for precaution's sake, a couple of officers accompany him while he takes these breaths of fresh air.

He goes on Sunday to the church in Vincent square, and on these occasions also he has a couple of innocent-looking attendants.

Moreover, there is no question of so many ounces of bread and meat, but if he has the money to pay for it he may feed himself upon the choicest viands that the most cultured palate could suggest.

The house of commons has a first class restaurant, where the hungry M. P. may dine as well as he could anywhere in London. Each day the dishes which the kitchen has prepared are indicated on a menu which is brought up to the prisoner, and he ticks off anything for which he feels a fancy, and it is brought to him. The only drawback from his point of view is that the bill is presented to him just as it would be anywhere else, and in the event of his refusing to pay up he would eventually be served with a court summons.

Among the occupants of the Clock Tower have been the late Charles Bradlaugh, who found himself consigned thither on account of a little difference with Mr. Speaker on the subject of the parliamentary oath. When Northampton returned Mr. Bradlaugh to parliament, he was not allowed to take the oath nor the substituted process known as affirmation. Mr. Bradlaugh, however, secured a New Testament and took a self-administered oath, after which he proceeded to the next step of signing the roll. He refused to withdraw when the speaker requested him to do so, and consequently the sergeant-at-arms took charge of him, and to the Clock Tower prison he went.

When the erection of the Tower bridge was being considered, a statement was made that the Tower bridge bill committee was subject to bribery and corruption—a serious charge. The men responsible for it were pronounced to have committed a breach of privilege, for the house is very sensitive upon such matters, and the speaker issued a summons for their appearance.

One of them, Mr. Ward, gave himself up without delay, and he got seven days in the Clock Tower prison. The other offender, after a little delay, was captured and was for a brief period housed at Newgate.

The first M. P. imprisoned in the present house of commons was W. Smith O'Brien. One day in 1846 he committed contempt of the house by declining to sit upon a certain committee. Consequently he was sent to prison during the few weeks that the committee deliberated. This time, however, he was not sent to the Clock Tower prison, which was not finished; but did his durance in the cellar of the house.

A Scotch Custom. Many parts of Scotland it used to be the custom to place on a man's tombstone the symbols of his trade. Thus a sugar cane would decorate the grave of a grocer; an ax and saw, with hammer and nails, would be found on that of a carpenter, an awl and a hammer on a shoemaker's grave, and so on.

The sorrow of yesterday is as nothing that of today is bearable; but that of tomorrow is gigantic, because it is distinct.
