FISHING FOR BIRDS.

LEAD PACKETS ONLY

Catching Gulls and Albatross With Rod and Line.

Curious though it may seem, it is a fact that birds are caught with rod and line in many parts of the world. The pastime is declared to be almost as fascinating as fishing. Gulls in Newfoundland are caught in this way in large quantities. In New England fishing for gulls and petrels is an important in-

The method of bird fishing is practically the same as that of ordinary fishing. Two men go out in a dory and throw pieces of cod liver on the water. When large quantities of birds have been attracted to the spot more cod liver is thrown out on a hook. This the birds greedily swallow and thus fail easy victims.

Albatross are fished for in the same way off the Cape of Good Hope. A piece of pork is attached to a long line and thrown overboard. The bird will eye it for a long time, gradually and cautiously making toward it. Suddenly he will seize it and hold it in his beak. When he discovers that he is caught he will sit on the water and vigorously flap his wings. However, he will be drawn into the boat and made a cap-

Albatross fishing is good sport, since the bird requires careful handling. So long as he pulls against the line it is easy enough. The moment, however, he swims forward the hook will drop from his beak unless it is skillfully manipulated, and the bird will find him-

A CURIOSITY IN BOOKS. The Famous Chained Library of

Wimbourne, Ireland. Wimbourne, Ireland, is noted for many things, but its famous chained library is perhaps the most notable of its curiosities. The library possesses unique interest as being one earliest attempts to disseminate knowledge among the people. The collection was made accessible to the people in 1686 and numbers some 200 volumes. The scarcity of books and the value of the collection are both indicated in the care taken for their preservation, and especially against loss of such treasures by theft. By means of chains and rods the books were securely fastened to the shelves, and these chains, it is rather surprising to learn, ware not removed until 1857, when the library fittings were repaired. Among the interesting works of the collection is a copy of the first edition of Sir Walter Raleigh's "History of the World," 1614. It has suffered from fire, and tradition says that Matthew Prior was responsible for its condition, the story being that he fell asleep when est volume in the library is a fine old copy in velicem of "Reginum Aninna-

TO REPEAL PENSIONS

Finance Minister Introduces Bill in the Commons.

Unpopular Measure to Be Repealed Although Minister Introducing It Thinks Principle of Act Repealed Is Right and Will Yet Be Accepted by the People-Lord's Day Amendment to Cause Confusion.

Ottawa, June 30.—In the House yesterday Mr. Fielding introduced his bill to repeal the act respecting annuities to certain Privy Councillors. The measure sets forth that the act of last session is repealed from July 1, 1906. In reply to a question for an explanation, Mr. Fielding recalled the fact that near the certain terms of the certain terms. the end of last session a series of fin-ancial measures were presented to the House. For all these measures, he thought, reasons more or less forcible could be given. Nevertheless, it must be confessed that the whole of these be confessed that the whole of these financial matters, coming forward at that stage of the session, had not been received with any wild enthusiasm by the general public. This particular measure had been the subject of very special criticism, and the Government had come to the conclusion to present to the House a bill repealing what was regarded as an obnoxious measure. The measure was right in principle, and, while it was the present very unpopular, he believed the time would come when it would be received in a different way.

Question of Vested Rights Mr. Foster inquired whether the Government had taken into consideration ernment had taken into consideration the matter of vested rights, which might have been created under the bill. Cer-tain action might have been taken by the beneficiaries of the act which in-volved others. Had any provison been made to meet such cases.

Mr. Fielding replied that having re-reading it once upon a time, and the pages were burned by his candle. It has been neatly repaired, and its mishap now adds to its interest. The oldest volume in the library is a fine old copy in velicin of "Reginum Aninnayear as settling the policy of the country, there was no bargain or contract constituting an arrangement between the beneficiaries and the Government.

The Lord's Day Bill.

When the Lord's Day bill was again taken up in committee, at Mr. Aylesworth's suggestion, Mr. Piche's amendment to clause 17, validating provincial laws relating in any way to the observance of the Lord's Day, was revised so as to retain the latter part of the clause relating to the method of proceeding against offenders which had been inadvertently struck out.

On motion of the Minister of Justice also clause 2 was amended in such a way as to prohibit the following of

Mr. Piche next moved that clause 2 be amended by validating all laws now in force or hereafter to be passed relating to the observance of the Lord's Day which came within the exclusive jurisdiction of Provincial Legislatures.

Mr. Aylesworth said he was glad to see the amendment proposed. It was

Means Nothing at All.

Mr. Borden said the amendment meant absolutely nothing at all. It was an attempt to wrest the constitution and change its entire scheme and scope. Federal matters were given over to provincial control and provincial functions were being usurped by Parliament. It was proper for this Parliament to fix a day of rest, but details as to observance should be relegated to the provinces. He expressed no opinion as to the constitutionality or the efficiency of the proposed amendment.
