knitting work, and sat there, grim with indig-nation. She knit and knit; but while she said, the fire burned. At last the broke out— "I tell you, Augustine, I can't get over things so, if you can. It's a pariest abouting-tion for you to defend such a system—that's my mind.

my mind!
"What now!" said St. Clare, looking up.

"What now?" said St. Clare, looking up.

"At it again, sh?"

"I say it's perfectly absnirable for you to defend such a system!?" said Miss Ophelia, with increasing warmth.

"I defend it!" said St. Clare.

"Of course you defend it—you all do—all you Southerners. What do you have slaves for, if you don'ts!"

"Are you such a sweet innocent as to suppose nobody in this world ever does what they don't think is right! Bon't you, or didn't you, over, do anything that you did not think unitaright?"

"If I do, I repent of it, I hope," said Miss Ophelia, rattling her needles with energy.

"So do I," said St. Clare, peeling his orange; "Pm repenting of it all the time."

"What do you keep on doing it for?

"Didn't you ever keep on doing wrong after you'd repented, my good cousin?"

"Well, only when I've been very much tempted," said Miss Ophelia.

"Well, Pm very much tempted," said St. Clare; "that's just my difficulty."

"But I always receive It won't, and try to break it off."

"Well, I have been resolving I won't, off and on their ten meters? and St. Clare.

mess. Miss Ophelia had never seen him in this mood before, and she sat perfectly ailent.

"I declare to you," said he, suddenly stopping before his cousin—" it's ne sort of use to talk or to feel on this subject—but I declare to you, there have been times when I have thought, if the whole country, would sink, and hide all this injustice and missry from the light, I would willingly sink with it. When I have been travelling up and down on our hosts, or about on my collecting tours, and reflected that every bratal, disgusting, mean, low-lived fellow I met, was allowed by our laws to become absolute despot of as many men, women, and children, as he could cheat, sical, or gamble money enough to buy—when I have seen such men in actual ownership of helpless children, of young girls and women—I have been ready to curse my country, to curse the human race!"

"A Augustine! Augustine!" said Miss Ophelia, "I'm sure you've said enough. I never in my life heard anthing, like this; even at the North!"

"At the North!" said St.Clare, with a sudden change of expression, and resuming something of his hibitual careless tone; "Pooh! you northern folks are cold-blooded; you are coof in everything! You can't begin to curse up hill and down, as we can when we get fairly at it."

"Well, but the question is"—said Miss Ophelia.

"Oh, yes, to be sure, the guestion is—and a lazy, twaddling, shiftless inbourers, who had grown up all their lives in the absence of every possible motive to learn how to do anything but shirk, an you Vermonters say, you'll see that there might naturally be on his plantation a great many things that looked horrible and distressing to a sensitive child like me.

"Besides all, he had an overseer—a great tall, slab-sided, two-fisted, renegade son of Vermont (begging your pardon), who had gone through a regular apprenticeship in hardness and brutality, and taken his degree to be alimited to practice. My mother never could endure him, nor I; but he obtained an entire section of the state.

"I was a little fellow then, but I had the same love that I have now for all kinds of his man was the absolute despot of the estate.

"I was a little fellow then, but I had the same love that I have now for all kinds of his man things—a kind of passion for the study of humanity, come in what shape it would. I was found in the cabins and among the field-hands great deal, and, of course, was a great favourier, and all sorts of complaints and grievances were breathed in my ear, and I told them to mother and we, between us, formed a sort of committee for a redress of grievances. We hindered and repressed a great deal of cruelty, and congratulated ourselves on doing a vast deal of good, till, as often happens, my soal overacted! Stabbe complained to my father that he could 't manage the hands, and mant resign his position. Father was a fond, indulgent husband, but a man that never flinehed from anything that he thought necessary; and so he put down his foot, like a ruck, between us and the field-hands. He told my mother, in language perfectly respectful and deferential, but quite explicit, that over the house-servants she should be entire mistress, but that with the field-hands he could allow no interference. He revered and respected her above all living beings, but he would have said it all the same to the Virgin May beveelf, if she had come in the way of his system.

"I used s
