Editorial Comment

THE NATION'S BUSINESS

The address of the president at the annual meeting of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association is a most important document of the year. For this reason the remarks of Mr. Henderson, the retiring president, have excited more than usual comment because of the rather gloomy view he takes of conditions after the war. Business men, financiers and economists have been struggling for many months to decide what position Canada will occupy in the business of the world when peace is resumed. It is the greatest economic question that has confronted business men since nations came to depend upon one another for the necessities of national life.

Will there be capital to finance a great industrial and agricultural expansion? Will there be a market for Canadian goods such as which we can pay for capital? Will there be a continued flow of immigration? And if these are as equipped to deal with it in a business-like way? Will there be a supply of highly skilled labor to work our factories? These are a few of the questions that have to be answered before we can say with any certainty that there will be good or bad times in Canada after the war.

To answer these questions the department heads at Ottawa respond. But there is a catch. Our trade, agriculture, immigration and labor, and the program. Business men in Canada have not been accustomed to appeal to department heads at Ottawa for answers. Why? A Canadian farmer, manufacturer or trader has a good deal of market for his goods. He solves it himself with the result that there is little government and no national policy.

Existing conditions constitute a great development out of which the Dominion will emerge with new ideas and new resources. It is not a question of whether we can or cannot do it. It is a question of whether we will do it. It is a question of whether we will do it. It is a question of whether we will do it.

in emergencies such a strength of character and such good business ability as has Sir Robert Borden, excepting, perhaps, the late Hon. Edward Blake.

The nation has faith in him and will support him in a reorganization of his cabinet on national, not party lines, to meet the present crisis in our affairs.—Financial Post.

ITALY'S AID IN THE WAR

Prior to the war, Italy was an ally of Germany and Austria. During the early stages it seemed that she would join the Teuton forces against us. She could not long tolerate the building diplomacy of the horrible atrocities of the Germans. Gradually the attitude of Austria and her refusal of Italy's neutrality demands, brought Italy into the war on our side.

One of the first and most important results of Italy's declaration of war against Austria was the further throttling of German supplies. It is probable that quantities of supplies of all kinds had been smuggled to Germany and Austria through the Mediterranean until the time of Italy's declaration. With the Italian navy on guard and the whole of Italy in arms against Germany's principal ally, such deliveries must have been completely stopped.

Italy ranks about fifth among the world's great military powers. She has a large and powerful fleet. Her naval program has been somewhat different than that of the other powers. In her battle ships, she has combined size, power and heavy armaments with high speed. Her dreadnought type is possibly not quite so powerful as that of the British navy, but has a great speed. She has developed her submarine section to a very high degree and has specially constructed and equipped vessels for salvaging, hunting, and repairing injured "commerce" while at sea. In fact these vessels are so constructed that they can completely receive an entire injured submarine as in a large locked-and proceed on their way while the submarine is being repaired inside. Such vessels will be of great assistance to the allies' fleet. Already the Italian fleet has done great damage to the Austrian fleet and has arranged to take part in the Dardanelles operations with the Allies.

The Italian army has a field strength of somewhat over 1,000,000. Their cavalry is recognized as among the best. The mountain artillery of the Italian army is the equal of any similar artillery in the world. In fact the whole Italian army is particularly good at mountain warfare due to the geography of their country. They have already abundantly illustrated this point in their continued defeats of the Austrian forces as they advance through the mountainous sections of south-western Austria. They are continuing with unabated speed and sweeping all before them. One great advantage for the Italian forces—army and navy—is the experience they have gained by the ten months of war before they actually entered. It enabled them to make the very best use of their forces, supplies and equipment. Thus, our new ally, Italy, completes the shutting out of supplies to Germany, and brings a very powerful force to bear against our common enemy, both on land and on sea, and in so doing, delivers a heavy blow on a frontier hitherto unattacked.

DOMINION DAY, 1915

For the first time in its existence, the birthday of the Dominion of Canada found the country engaged in a life and death struggle for existence. Forty-eight placid years of peace, barely rippled by two or three purely domestic commotions, had given Canada no preparation for such a mighty, important contest, as the ambitious programme that Germany has forced upon us.

In fact, to all but a minority of far-sighted observers, the attack upon good faith and civilization, came with the proverbial suddenness of "a bolt from the blue." Happily, for us, the attack was such a palpable endeavor to substitute prepared might for right, that unless we were prepared to surrender all that religion and civilization had taught us regarding the relative positions of righteousness and brute strength, Canadians were simply compelled to present a united front to the enemy.

We entered the war as a part of the Empire, not at the call of an armed king, or a shouting demagogue, but as free men who believed that good faith and the right to independent existence were things worth fighting for—dying for if necessary. And, until we have won the fight against wanton brutality and broken pledges, Canada will remain in the war, no matter how heavy the cost may be.

Dominion Day in this year of grace, found us, therefore, following with anxious eyes the fortunes of between fifty and sixty thousand of our bravest and best, in the bitter, most tremendous war, time has seen. In all our cities and towns the war drum is beating into Canadian souls the reality of war in which we perform have a place; which is making us realize as never before

The Financial Post is in accord with Mr. Henderson to the extent at least that we believe that this is no time for Canadians to pat themselves upon the back contented in the prospect of post bellum prosperity. We must work and we must save but we require the guidance of a well informed and capable government that our savings may be well invested and that our work may go to produce goods that we can sell in the markets of the world.

With the proper national organization, guidance and direction, emigrants and money will pour in, and Canada can be made to prosper as we have never prospered before; and we can easily carry and pay off our present terrific burdens for municipal national and railway development, as well as those that are accumulating for war and pensions. If we do not now organize our Government on business instead of political lines, we will have years of depression.

A study of the records will show that no national leader has displayed

CANADIAN GUNS NOT CAPTURED

Writing to his brother in Montreal, a Montreal gunner refers to the artillery part of the Battle of Langemarck in the following terms: "Reports said we lost our guns, but this was a mistake. We were not there. We have not seen the Canadians since Neuve Chapelle. We fired over 1,000 rounds one day. You could not hear anything but the big guns thundering for six hours."—Family Herald.

Too Much Fast Driving

Editor Advocate: Dear Sir: Just a few lines regarding auto drivers who pay no attention to the speed limit or the necessity of blowing their horns when approaching street corners. It is now coming to this, that it will either be necessary to post placards at street corners to remind them of their duty, or being our policemen to a realization that the matter rests in their hands to arrest all offenders, no matter who they may be. The safety of the public must be looked after, and before some accident occurs.

Trusting the above will appeal to you, and thanking you for space.

the unity of the Dominion, and of that forlorn confederacy the British Empire. The Gram beats call to us that the Dominion is more than the farm, the village, the city, the Province, as our Empire is more than our Dominion. We rise above the local, the petty, to the Empire, that immense whole represented by its soldiers on the many war fronts of this Titanic struggle.

It is the time for thinking largely, imperially. That means, it is the time for subordinating little personal interests to the interests of the Empire at large. We cannot preserve our national existence by confining our thoughts and actions to Canada alone. The Empire calls to us, for if the Empire were shattered now, the fragments would soon be gobbled up by the greedy foe, and the Dominion of Canada would become the spoil of some other confederacy.

Canada elects, now as ever to stand by and form part of that brightest galaxy of nations the world has ever seen, the British Empire. The development of her matchless resources can best be accomplished under such conditions. The aspirations of a free people can best be satisfied under British rule. For therein, as its history proves, the ideal prevails, which is ultimately to prevail universally, that it is not armed might, nor diplomatic cunning, but Righteousness that exalteth a nation.

It is to prove our belief in that ideal theorem, that Dominion Day, 1915, finds us doggedly and determinedly engaged in bringing this outrageous war to its legitimate ending.—Family Herald.
