Who is Responsible?

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—Kindly allow me space in the columns of your widely circulated paper to make a few remarks re a fence which was erected some short time ago on LeMarchant Road. I presume for advertising purposes. In the storm which raged on Saturday morning, it was blown clean away from the posts to the other side of the street, a distance of about 60 feet, and only that it happened so early in the morning, when few people were about, a serious accident might have resulted. The fence since its erection has never been used, but has been a good advertising board for immoral drawings and writings not fit for any man, woman or child to gaze on. Now, Mr. Editor, what I want to know is this. Who is responsible for the damage done? Isn't the Municipal Council, for allowing it to be erected without seeing that it was properly

Why Who's Who.

BY H. L. RANN.
In all the bright galaxy of battle-scared veterans who picked up a few additional scars in the recent campaign and will go home soon to apply orica and think it over, no name shines out more resplendent than that of Senator Murray W. Crane of Massachusetts. True, the senator was not defeated for re-election, but he could see it coming on a dog trot and decided to retire before it became necessary to put up the jiffy curtains. Senator Crane is a noiseless, ball-bearing public servant who can walk over a Wilton velvet rug without disarranging the nap. His methods are not showy, and when he has anything important to say he says it in a caring-planissimo. After the retirement of Senator Aldrich he bossed the senate with white kid gloves and rubber heels, and would probably be bossing it yet were it not for the revolutionary instincts of one T. Roosevelt, who drew several word pictures of the senator which portrayed him as a mild-mannered, bald-headed brigand. Senator Crane is a wealthy man and pays his house rent promptly on the first of the month. He made his money by manufacturing paper and selling it to the United States government at a profit as modest as the senator himself. Mr. Crane has no expensive tastes and frequently is detected in wearing the same necktie two days in succession. He wears a high, arched forehead, which is not inconvenienced by plumage, and, unlike his distinguished colleague, Henry Cabot Lodge, he has every appearance

The fate of Franklin, the explorer, was unwittingly prefigured, and on the eve of his starting on his last voyage, at the hands of his own devoted wife. As he lay dozing on a sofa Lady Franklin threw something over his feet, on which he awoke in consternation, saying: "Why, there's a flag thrown over me! Don't you know that they lay the Union Jack over a corpse?"
