LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 2.
A large whiskey warehouse collapsed to-day, releasing 5,000 barrels into the river, valued at $250,000. The threatened collapse of the warehouse is the only source of anxiety now, as the crest of the flood has passed. The floods are still menacing several cities, and refugees are increasing in numbers.

ROME, April 2.
At Syracuse harbor two convicts escaped more than 2 feet in diameter, joined with a rotary apparatus, have been discovered. One disc is pierced with a circular hole in the centre. They are believed to be the celebrated burning mirror invented by Archimedes for the destruction of the ships of the enemies by focussing the sun's rays on them.

LONDON, April 2.
The Navy League expresses disappointment at Churchill's reply on Monday, notably as it refers to the Dominions ships. His admission relative to the weakness of the position of affairs in 1906, the League regards as disappointing. The League regards the employment of the ships as an Imperial squadron as a violation of the agreement with the Dominions, that they should be additional. Under the proposed arrangement they would be doing, according to the League, work that belongs to the British Navy.

LONDON, April 2.
Claims that radium can restore the hardened arteries of middle aged people and so prolong life, are made by Dr. Sandermann of Berlin in a lecture at London before the Röntgen Society. If correct it will be possible to buy a few pounds of radium and place in the bottom of a glass bottle, filled with water. The water becomes charged with radium emanations, which remain active for hundreds of years, so that renewal of the water ensures an unlimited number of doses.

ATHENS, April 2.
The most impressive ceremonies that modern Greece has ever witnessed, marked the burial of King George to-day. The royal princes and representatives from the courts of Europe and America joined deputations from European Turkey, islands in the Aegean Sea, and from Asia Minor, each in their distinctive national dress. The soldiers and clergy rivalled each other in numbers, all branches of the army and church being represented at the head of the procession. The coffin was borne on a gun carriage, and was followed by King Constantine, the Crown Prince of Greece and his royal princes. Then came emissaries from foreign states in carriages, preceding the Queen Dowager, Queen Consort and other princesses. The Greek Cabinet and ministers, members of the diplomatic corps, and practically all the members of the Greek Parliament, the municipal officials, prominent civilians, and a host of deputations from patriotic societies took their places in the procession, which was interspersed with large bodies of troops, most of whom had participated in the war. A prominent feature was the Holy Standard of the Greeks, which had never before

Morris's Election Kite.

An Invitation to Bankruptcy — A Stumbling Block to Progress.

But, presto! a change! This self-confidence has suddenly vanished. The electorate spurns the Morrisites, are not so pronounced in their support of our party after all. Wherever shall we confirm the faithful, hearken the lukewarm and attract to our ranks him that standeth aloof? Reduce revenue, cut down taxation, for who can resist the temptation of such bait? So the Honorable House of Assembly proceeds to shoot holes through the tariff and the revenue immediately becomes $400,000 less. And now Morris is confident that the electorate is bound to him with bands of gold.

But is it? Are our electors such simpletons that they cannot recognize political kiting when they see it? Are they thoroughly convinced that Morris's latest move is a wise one, and do they consider the gift of $10 to each family—as the McGrath political daily message triumphantly puts it—sufficient compensation for this hazardous "parade" down of the revenue? To all of which an adaptation of Kipling's famous lines is sufficient reply—

"The voter ain't no bloomin' fool—
"You bet the voter sees."

REVENUE FINANCING.
Where has Morris landed the country's finances? Pretty near that ruinous locality familiarly referred to as "the low-wows." He has added six million dollars to our debt—and another addition of two million is in prospect—on an over-hasty policy of branch-railroad building. At four per cent per annum, we have to pay $220,000 yearly interest on this account, computing merely at simple interest. The Government next proceeds to reduce revenue $400,000 and we are immediately led to ask where the $720,000 are to be made up? Certainly not out of surpluses, these have now been wiped out. It is infinitely bad policy either to raise expenditure to the limit of income or cut down income to the limit of expenditure. This country has no corner on prosperity and its people would prefer seeing it with a goodly margin of surplus wherewith to assuage its solvency in times of financial stress which, sure as fate, come, sooner or later, to the individual or the nation. A gift of $10 per family then removes the generous margin that stood between our comfortable income and the "hand-to-mouth" existence to which Morris has reduced us. It takes away our great encouragement to foreign capitalists to risk money on us and our affairs. It represents a standing invitation to bankruptcy, a stumbling block to progress, a set-back to plans for the improvement of the mental and material condition of our people.
