Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

WHICH IS THE BEST SPORT.

We fell to talking about law breaking the other day. I don't mean big offenses, murder and theft and that sort of thing, but the breaking of little laws, city ordinances, small infringements of liquor laws, and so forth.

The thing that interested me was the way most of those who spoke, seemed to look upon any infringement that they could achieve and get away with as something clever, something to be proud of, something sporting.

They say that woman fears the law, but does not respect it.

Men may have less fear of the law, but I cannot seem to see that they have any more respect.

Just Like Small Boys.

I wonder how many men there are in the United States who have not boasted or heard an acquaintance boast of some infringement of the liquor law. One man has "a wonderful recipe"; another knows a man who took a 300-mile auto trip "to get some booze"; a third tells of a splendid place in New York where "if someone just says you are all right you can get all you want"; a fourth knows a bootlegging doctor, etc., etc.

No small boy boasting about playing hooky from school ever seemed more small boyish than these men.

Now I'm not planning to talk about the liquor law. Even if I wanted to, that's not my place. But here's what hits me about these and all other such infringements—the men who accomplish them, seem to think, as I said, that they are doing a very sporting thing.

Well, are they?

Ten On a Desert Island.

Suppose ten men were wrecked on a desert island and had to band together and make certain rules for the common good which, would be the better sport, the man who transgresses every chance he could get, or the man who kept them as long as they remained an agreement?

And what is all law and all civilization except an agreement of some millions of men to put certain restrictions upon themselves for the greatest good of the greatest number?

And isn't it more sporting to keep these agreements than to try to sneak out of them?

Of course I'm only a woman and therefore, incompetent to judge such things! But it does seem to me a point of view that is worth at least taking into consideration.

The Kaiser's Impossible Sons.

The suicide of Prince Joachim of Prussia, the youngest son of the Emperor William, is hardly a matter of surprise, for he had been burning the candle at both ends and in the middle of his life after his wife left him—and that only happened after he had made married life impossible—seem to have been one long drunken debauch. But, peace to his ashes, he was the only one of the Emperor's sons to get near enough to the fighting to get wounded, and his wound was not a serious one. It was the Emperor's intention to install Prince Joachim as King of Lithuania, which was the reason why his fighting was done on the Eastern front. I have very little doubt that the Lithuanians are devoutly thankful that the Prince never reigned in that country, and his suicide, perhaps, is a blessing in disguise, for it certainly is a very patent deterrent to those who are willing to light the blaze again in order to get the Hohenzollerns back upon the throne. The recent wedding of Princess Alexandra Victoria of Schleswig Holstein, who was until recently the wife of Prince August, William, the fourth son of the Kaiser, and to whom she has preferred her chauffeur, is another instance of the marital impossibility of the Emperor's sons.—Glasgow Weekly Herald.

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited. Gentlemen,—I have used MINARD'S LINIMENT on my vessel and for my family for years, and for the everyday ills and accidents of life I consider it has no equal. I would not start on a voyage without it, if it cost me a dollar a bottle.

Premier and Poland.

"Poland is the lynch-pin of the Treaty of Versailles," as Mr. Churchill said picturesquely in an article in yesterday's London Evening News. Yet if the armistice terms which the Bolsheviks have proposed to Poland are correctly reported, Lenin and Trotsky are attempting, in collusion with their secret allies, the Germans, to smash that "lynch-pin."

This is not a manoeuvre which the British Government can tolerate for a moment. In the Note of July 11, to Lenin, the British Government stated:

"If Soviet Russia, despite its repeated declarations . . . intends 'to take action hostile to Poland in its own territory, the British Government and its Allies would feel bound to assist the Polish nation with all the means at their disposal.'"

By this declaration the British Government assumed a heavy responsibility, and incurred special obligations to Poland which it can by no possibility evade. It has bound itself, if the Bolshevik terms are as reported, to give the Poles all the aid in its power. It has bound itself, that is to say, to help them with arms, munitions, and aircraft, for it has no troops to send. The destruction of Poland would mean that the Treaty of Versailles had been torn up and that Germany had won the peace.

There never was a moment which demanded wiser statesmanship. Yet in face of Mr. Bonar Law's declaration in the House of Commons on Tuesday, that "negotiations with the Soviet Government must be futile" unless the British prisoners in Russia and at Baku are released, it is reported that the Bolshevik trade mission is about to return to London though those prisoners are still in misery. If this news is true, then our Government has been guilty of the most lamentable weakness, and has disgracefully failed in its duty to the British victims in Bolshevik hands.—Daily Mail, July 29.

EVIL TIMES.

Oh, these are crucial times, my friends; each day presents its warning; and every time the night descends we think there'll be no morning. Our statesmen rag us from the stump, until they're in a lather, and say we're going to the dump, where all the bow-wows gather. Our sacred rights are trodden flat, our bulwarks badly shaken, and if we don't do this or that we're bound to lose our bacon. It is the bogie, gray and old, of Presidential seasons, the wrath that makes our feet grow cold, and undermines our reasons. At other times we do not think of chaos, in our hurry; our bulwarks may be on the blink, but we don't pause to worry. The country seems to slide along, and nothing yet has wrecked it, and if its works are badly wrong, we simply don't detect it. And then we put up candidates to cop the White House honor, and these potential magistrates, insist the land's a goner. If 't'other fellow wins the prize, becomes the nation's master, then we'll confront, with startled eyes, all kinds of black disaster. Once in four years we get this scare, when candidates assemble; we walk the edges of despair, and wring our hands and tremble.

All prices are marked in plain figures at Smallwood's Big Shoe Sale.—Aug 6, 19.

LINES FOR AN AMERICAN.

I hold to this: My country needs The very finest of my deeds, On me forever she depends To be the staunchest of her friends; If I desert, then to her name I bring a touch of needless shame.

She trusts me wheresoe'er I be, And by that trust has set me free; I speak her thoughts, for in her schools I learned to know her code of rules, And what in me is good or ill Strangers translate into her will.

I face the wide world as a man Stamped with the brand "American"; From what I am and what I do, My country shall have judgment, too; Therefore, straightforward I must be That she may meet no shame through me.
