Musical selections, which were enjoyed by everybody, were rendered by the Young Men's club orchestra. Games were played, the old-fashioned romping kind and they were played with the school-day vim. The refreshments were served from a long table which was decorated with vases of sweet peas encircled with panicles.

TENNIS CLUB BALL

The annual ball of the Lawn Tennis club was a splendid success as to attendance, music, refreshments and "hair women."

The only drawback was the excessive heat, and the street in front of the Al Azhar Hall was lined with promenaders who flocked outside, after each dance.

The orchestra rendezvous was held with form and grace, and to the dancers it was good to hear the favorite, popular dance music of last winter once again, luring all dance lovers to join in the waltz of two steps.

EXTREMES OF TYPES OF ENGLISH WOMEN

Vienna Doctor Divides Women of England Into Two Classes

One is Masculine and Energetic; the Other is Doll-Like and Infantile

Vienna, August 9.—In an interesting article entitled "Impressions of a Physiological Analyst in London," which he contributed to "Image," a scientific review, Dr. A. Maeder, of Zurich, divides the women of English into two classes, which are represented by the extremes of the masculine and the doll-like types.

"The first may be immediately recognized," he writes, "by the build, which shows masculine traits, the face being angular with something rough about the features, while the said has something disagreeably delicate, energetic and heavy. The latter belongs to this type. Her manner of thought and feeling is 'ego-central'."

Lack of Womanliness

"The impression of a want of womanliness is received everywhere in London. Compare, for instance, two theatrical performances, the one in Paris and the other in London. In London dancing and ballet are merely gymnastic exercises, completely lacking in womanly character and feminine grace. The English idea of beauty is that of a Botticelli Madonna. No full, ripe forms are aimed at, but the attainment of the straight line. The undeveloped girl is the ideal of the English woman who wears skirts at 50. The Rubens type is never seen."

"To this ideal of the straight line to eat sufficient food on the part of the English girl is no doubt due. I gained the impression that many of these girls did not desire marriage, or at least wished to put it off as long as possible. The other type, the 'doll,' which I very seldom see here, is quite infantile and undeveloped. She seemed to me like a pretty plaything."

Hints on Washing Windows

Processes of window cleaning: Such being the method of handling a window, I tremains to consider the processes involved in its cleaning. Remove, on push away all draperies. Take down or roll the shade to the top; and brush the blinds as far as possible. The field being so cleared for action, dust first, better with a cloth than with a brush. Then wash. The necessity of rinsing will depend on the method employed in cleaning. Drying, and polishing follow. If the drying of the panes is done with much force, there may not require further polishing. For the sashes, polishing will probably include oiling. You may have to go back to wipe dry the sashes if they need to be left to soak in oil. Cloths: For dusting use a cloth soft and rough in the centre of woolly, not rough to feel. This does not mean wool; for flannel is expensive, hard to wash, and gets hard itself. Cheese-cloth medium grade, and unbleached, is about the best.

For washing, wool holds the most moisture, but takes it slowly. Linen takes quickly, and holds fairly well. Old linen is rather too good for washing for medical purposes to use this way. Old cotton, old sheets are good.

If not so old as to be lumpy, old underwear (gauze undershirts) make very good cleaning cloths. (Say "cloths," not "rags" to a maid. It endears more respect for the article, and is likely to secure for it greater care.)

Absorption is the point to be considered in a drying cloth. If it had not a higher value, linen would be the fabric par excellence for this. Cheese-cloth is very good. For polishing champagne is fine, but expensive, and one must know how to wash it. Newspapers do excellent polishing.

Methods: Consider the kind of glass, the weather, and the temperature, then choose that method which best satisfies these conditions at the time.

Use of water: Make it a rule to use as little as possible; never enough to run. That pits up rubbing for you. A damp sponge does excellent work for cleaning. Many people use three chemicals.

Ammonia: On fine plate glass windows, clear water, preferably tepid, may be used with advantage. Hot water evaporates too soon, and cold water takes much longer. A little bit of ammonia is safe and acts much quicker on the windows. Being an alkali, it will cut the grease. Being a volatile alkali, it would evaporate in hot water.

William Russell's Beauty Secrets

The Unconsciousness of Real Grace

A woman has entered our midst with the glorious mission of teaching the American society woman grace. She advertised the fact that she is to show our ultra fashionable women in the most vivid possible manner just how to rise, to sit, to leave and to enter a carriage, to courtesy and to do endless gymnastics that society women are called upon to do.

The chief principle of the instruction is thinking right. "If one always thinks beautiful thoughts one will always be beautiful." That is quite true, and if one thinks of the thing one wants to do, and not just how one is going to do it, one will have all the necessary grace required for the doing.

This teacher of grace speaks much about center poise, and says that American women all upon their backs and not upon their spines. All this diverting and beside the point. She speaks much of deep breathing and means to say that the secret of poise and grace.

Our American women do not exercise enough. Still, it is not exercise after meals is conducive to heaviness. Women who have adopted the fad of walking or standing immediately after meals are more graceless than those who lounge about a room. Grace is inborn—there are women who are graceful in anything they undertake, and not upon their spines. There are those who cannot be graceful under any circumstances.

Cultivation of grace is the cultivation of the physical body, but is entirely mechanical unless a gentleness of manner accompanies it. To enter a carriage gracefully, to sit, to rise, to greet a friend, to courtesy to royalty or to walk across a room is entirely a matter of physical condition.

A woman whose muscles are pliant, and who carries little flesh, is always more graceful than a fat woman. She can bend and turn in a lithe manner without stiffness or jerkiness, whereas a heavy woman—I mean not heavy in weight, but heavy in muscle and mind—will be stiff and awkward in anything she may do.

If this woman can instill in her audience a desire to be graceful in manner through kindness of heart and good fellowship, her work will be a boon to all womankind. To find your center poise, you must know your motive and from that motive and honesty of purpose, combined with a desire for making others happy instead of gathering happiness from others, you will add grace to every action, either physical or mental.

Remember: Whether the knee bends
