LITTLE GIRL'S DRESS.

Green Cheviot With a Plaid Silk Blouse

This pretty design of a little girl's gown may be reproduced in any of the goods of this season's stock, preferably of cheviot. The illustration represents a green cheviot with a plaid silk blouse vest front and a collar of dark green velvet. The sailor effect in the back and the figaro jacket effect in the front, are the novel and attractive features of the pattern. The gown may also be made of plaid goods with a plain silk blouse front and a velvet collar of the same shade as the blouse silk. Camel's hair, serge, cashmere or cheviot are satisfactory fabrics from which to make this gown. It may be made very dressy by combining old rose cashmere with a delicate shade of apple-green silk, the latter in the blouse front. In this case the velvet may be the same shade of old rose or green to match the blouse front.

Some of the Stuffs.

Satin, velveteen and crepen, as well as all the wool materials are liked for house wear, while satin in light colors is favored in combination with a dark stuff. The crepons show smaller weaves and are frequently embroidered in tiny pin heads, crescents of stars the same color as the back ground. Skirts for the street are being made longer, and in consequence those intended only for the house have the slightest suggestion of a train. And this slight train really makes every woman, wise enough to wear it, look more graceful. A house gown showing a black and ecru combination has a skirt of black crepon flaring gracefully and resting at least three inches on the ground at the back. From the waist extending to below the knee come ecru satin ribbon ends, two on each side. One of each is held down by a huge bow of similar ribbon, which is sewed to the background in such a way that it looks as if it were appliqued. The other end is cut crosswise and allowed to flare. The bodice is a short, round basque, the front cut away to allow a box-plaited gilet of ecru satin in rows upon it to be seen. An enormous collar, square in the back and shawl-shaped at the sides, is of ecru lace of the coarse variety fancied. The full sleeves are of the crepon, and are drawn in to cuffs of the satin overlaid with the lace, and having, on the outer side of each cuff, as if holding the lace down, a row of gold buttons. The high stock is of broad black satin ribbon with its bow in front, and baving from under this bow a cravat of lace like the

After all, even the Watteau shepherdesses, herding their flocks in fleecy finery, under pictured skies which remained conveniently rainless-even they wore bustles-of wool.

Which from our pretty lambs we'll pull perhaps, or all of lightest down compact; one can't imagine them using woven wire or any such horrible contrivance of the age of steel.

They say that bustles are coming in again. I hesitate to believe it, and hope that the tentative beginnings of them which our eyes can't help seeing will not grow to such monstrous proportions as some of us-alas !- are old enough to remember, but will remain at least innocuous as the horse-hair-lined skirts, which are all that are left us from the crinoline panic. In a way, the things go together. The stiff wide skirts we have now look none the worse for the insidious bit of fulness at the back and so little by little the thing might grow again to the ancient horrors; but-

Pleasanter to think upon are the trifles of scissors, purse, thimbles, lockets and the like-in useless silver all-which hang from beauty's waist. Even while skating one wears the jingling chatelaines, so that a skate key, if she needs it, is one of the most appropriate bits of bric-a-brac. Whatever there may be thus dependent, it must be little and of silver or gold, solid and set with tiny stones if one's purse be long enough. Gems glitter too, in the gold filigree of the high comb which ladies young and old wear with such coquettish effect.

Dress Buttons.

In nothing has artistic ingenuity been so taxed as in the designing and manufacturing of this season's buttons. Some of them range as high as $6 to $8 each. The pearl buttons are enormously large and elaborately carved, and steel buttons are in every imaginable shape and size. There are jet buttons with solid cut jet centers the size of a silver half dollar, and smaller, round, oval, oblong, marquise and crescent-shaped, set in rhinestones and silver; buttons with opaline, sapphire, ruby, emerald, amethyst, topaz and turquoise centers, set in rhinestones; plain rhinestone buttons, set in silver in every form, star, crescent, square and anchor-shaped; steel and rhinestones set in rows and figures; miniature buttons, in classic, Elizabethan, Queen Anne, Empire and Louis XIV. style, each one perfect in painting and set in rhinestones or pearls; pink, cream and brown cameo buttons, high relief and intaglio, representing heads, figures and scenery, and also in jewelled settings, Egyptian cameos, in dark reds, greens, and browns, in dull gold rims; plain red, purple or green enamel, with a superimposed design in gold or silver filigree; solid enamel buttons, in geometric and mosaic designs with jewelled settings, and a hundred styles in tiny jewelled buttons, to be applied in rows to evening and reception toriettes.

It's Cruel for them not to give you Pearline for your washing. Your folks can't know much about it. My! They could save their money, and all your hard work besides. I'm thankful the lady I live with is just the other way. She knows what Pearline will do, and she wants it. She'd never let me lose my time trying to get things clean with soap—and she wouldn't stand it to have her clothes all worn out with rubbing, either." That's the truth. The lack of Pearline comes just as hard on the mistress' clothes as it does on the laundress' back. 487 Beware of imitations. JAMES PYLE, N.Y.
