break on the frontier. At Canea the insurgent leaders reiterate their refusal to accept autonomy from the powers, and declare that if the island is not annexed to Greece they desire war. If it were not for the support afforded the Turks by the powers, they would in a short time he driven from the island. It is believed that success has so intoxicated the leaders of the insurgents that they would not hesitate to assume actual hostilities against the troops If they should join forces with the Greek army of occupation and resist the powers, it would take a strong force and a large expenditure of money to conquer them. The situation of the Turkish garrison in the fort at Malaxa is very critical.

The place is besieged by insurgents, and the Turkish troops have not enough provisions to last them more than two days. Attempts have been made to revictual the fort, but the insurgents have rendered the efforts fruitless. If the Christians capture the forts at Malaxa and Keratidi, which it now appears highly probable they will do, Canea will be virtually blockaded landward. Malaxa is within the limits of the Turkish cordon drawn by the admirals of the foreign fleets, but this fact does not prevent the operations of the insurgents within the line, they refusing to recognize the authority of the admirals to establish such a cor-church, show that 100 Christians were massacred. The Armenian quarter and bazar were given over to pillage for eight hours.

The representations of the ambassadors of the foreign powers regarding the condition of Anatolia have made but little impression upon the Sultan, who, relying upon the support of Russia is convinced that he has nothing to fear from the so-called concert of the powers, which is continually harped upon, although it is believed that little or no concert beyond the desire in some quarters to postpone an outbreak of war really exists.

The diplomats here are said to be once more turning their attention to conduct of the Sultan, and it is semi-officially intimated that they are again of the opinion, so frequently attributed to them, that the system friendly representations on the subject of Armenia which has hitherto beer methods of dealing with the evils of which complaint is made. But the Suitan has heard this story many times during the past few years, and he consoles himself with the belief that he will survive this new fit of righteous indignation, as he has tided

The Porte has raised no objections up to the present, believing that the foreign fleets will then carry out the threat of the powers to blockade the principal ports and coasts of Greece. On this question, however, there is no unanimity of opinion, the impres-
