The city is quiet. Many strikers have returned to work. The torpedo boat destroyer upon her arrival here fired a blank shot across the bow of the British steamer Cranley, lying off Fontana, for the purpose of taking off British subjects if necessary. The destroyer signaled the Cranley to accompany her inside the harbor. The Cranley complied, the destroyer in the meanwhile keeping her guns trained on the steamer. His Early Work,

John Hay was born in Salem, Ind., Oct. 8, 1838. After graduating from the common schools of Warsaw, Ill., he went to Springfield for his academic education. From there he went to Brown University, from which institution he graduated with high honors in 1858. During his career he received many honorary degrees from leading eastern colleges.

After his admission to the Illinois bar, in 1874, his rise in the political world was rapid. He was one of President Lincoln's private secretaries, and was afterward rapid. He was one of President Edition's private secretaries, and was afterward assistant adjutant-general of United States volunteers. His next public services took him to Paris, Madrid and Vienna. Washington, July 2. - The three men who will undoubtedly have the most serious consideration by President Roosevelt as successor to Mr. Hay are William H. Taft, of Ohio, secretary of war; Joseph H. Choate, of New York, late ambassador to England, and Elihu Root, of New York, formerly secretary of war. Other names will doubtless be taken up by the President, including that of John C. Spooner, United States senator from Wisconsin, but it seems almost cerlater made charge d'affaires, In 1879 he was made assistant secretary of state. He is best known politically as having served as secretary of state under President McKinley and President Roosevelt.

Of these, the feeling at the state department is that circumstances would seem to make Mr. Choate the logical successor of Mr. Hay, though the desire of the President to see Mr. Taft fill the vacancy is not gainsaid.
