FIND THE HIRED MAN.

THE Minister of Agriculture, Hon. Martin Burrell, has launched an ambitious and businesslike campaign for the stimulation of farming. To bring about a large increase in production, to throw open the facilities of the Government to each farmer and to reach every farmer in the country with the appeal by means of the best weekly and daily newspapers is an undertaking that will have whole hearted support from men on both sides of politics.

There can be no objection to a greater production on Canadian farms. The return to the farmer is sure to be greater, and as the war proceeds there will be an increase in demand that will not permit of glutted markets. At the same time, there will be an easement of prices to the city consumer that would not be in evidence if production remained the same or fell off.

Every farmer should write for the information that is offered by the Government in the form of a booklet which has many facts as to improved methods in agriculture and marketing. It is a piece of literature prepared by the experts in Canadian agriculture, a brochure of opportunity, making plain the open markets that are bare of Canadian produce and the splendid chances of export business. Think of what scientific methods of egg raising might do for this country-yet we are importing eggs in large quantities and allowing the British market to be the special property of Denmark, Russia and other European countries.

In the course of several years' study of the problems of the farmer, particutarly in Western Ontario, The Advertiser has received the conviction that greater than all expert advice and urging to improvement, is the problem of the hired man. Those who have Ontario Opposition, pointed out in travelled through this district in connection with The Advertiser's "Stay in campaign invariably brought back the verdict: "The farmer's will produce more if they are given capable You will find in the counties of Lambton, Elgin, Huron, most scientific of farmers, who without the handicap of lack of labor would being about revolutions in agriculture The man is the great problem. tion of both employer and employee, for the farmer is hard put to get the right assistant, and there is no doubt that thousands of men with farm experience are out of work.

The Advertiser wishes the campaign for increased production every success. Every extra bushel or dozen or quart or pound produced is good for the country; it is good for the consumer; it is good for the railways and their employees; it is good for the stronger ties of trade with the Mother Country. But it must proceed on the same practical lines as have marked its commencement. Every aid must be given in the stimulation of the "Produce More" sentiment, and the farmer must be assisted in securing the right men, even if it became necessary to place a man in every county to give the problem special treatment.

The advertisements which are appearing in the newspapers will at least prove to the farmer how important is the part he plays in times of peace or

YESTERDAY.

S PRING has many beginnings. Some say the first of March, if it comes in like a lamb, Wordsworth fixed on "the first mild day of March" as the appointed time from which to "our living calendar." The equinox has its supporters, while the pessimists who cry that we have "seven months winter and the rest mostly fall," will probably defer the glimmer of spring to April or May. St. Valentine's Day is, however, the date of the optimists, of youth and vision. It felt like spring yesterday, with clouds racing from southward and streets bathed in streams. A day or two more like this and robins will float in with characteristic dash.

Perhaps it is safer now to say that St. Valentine belongs rather to the children than to youth. The game once played in sentimental earnest by overs has now descended in some measure to the careless sport of unconscious childhood. And yet the older people even, and shining adolescence itself, have not quite forgotten the charm of the occasion. A bouquet of violets showed in more than one winlow yesterday; many a lover, young and old, no doubt stirred flame or the embers of the ancient rite. As a children's day, the 14th of

February ranks below Christmas indeed, but above Hallowe'en or April Fool's, or even Easter Monday and Pancake Tuesday, For lovers new and old there is an atmosphere of rosemary or budding rose, as the case may be. and a keen hint of spring and summer that Mr. Rowell's presentation of the issues involved in the war, and, above all, his masterly exposition on the principles upon which Britain's greatness is founded, and through which imperial unity and strength have developed, made his address easily the finest which Halifax has heard since the outbreak of the war. Ontario may well be congratulated upon enlisting in its public service such a gifted leader as Mr. Rowell. The message which he delivered to the Canadian Club will be an inspiration in the days of stress and anxiety which are to St. John Telegraph: If those who heard Mr. N. W. Rowell yesterday before the Canadian Club of this city could have their way, they would, no doubt, have everybody in New Brunswick listen to the same speech. Perhaps no one who has spoken in this city since the war began brought out so pointedly the duty of every citizen of the Empire in these circumstances. The address of Mr. Rowell is at once an inspiration and a battle-cry. [IN WAR TIME.]

[BY R. H. COWAN, BERLIN, ONT.] "England and Wales, Scotland and Ireland, India, Egypt, Canada, Australia, New Zealand-the Empire holds together. From East and West and North and South sounds back the answering hum of marching men."-London (Eng.) Correspondent.

Said John Bull, "I've received some reports From my partners, who're very good sports, From all parts of the world, Where our Flag is unfurled, They are sending me help of all sorts."

Said Canadians, "We're taking our stand, We're a part of the Imperial Band; Ninety thousand or so Of our brave soldiers go.

And we send best supplies in the land," Said the Southern Cross men, "It is true, Bismarck Islands we've captured for you: We're Australia's sons.

Fighting Turks and the Huns. And we're singing "The Red, White and Blue."

Said New Zealand, "The War Lord is vexed That Samoa we quickly annexed, But the Militant Kalser Will be madder and wiser .-We'll be taking some more islands next."

Said the Boers, "We're a Nation just hatched. And as fighters we cannot be matched; Loyal Britishers now, We will help in this row Till the roof of the Kaiser's unthatched"

Said the proud, warlike Princes of Ind, "Our allegiance we'll never rescind: With our hosts, we're allied At the front, by your side And we'll scatter our foes to the wind."

Said Egyptians, "Where Pyramids pile, There we're guarding the Land of the Nile, And when vict'ry shall be For the Flag of the Free, Then the Sphinx shall be wreathed with a smile.'

Said the Scots, "We have made the advance To the line of the fighting in France. Where, on many a field. We have made the foe yield At the point of the bayonet and lance.'

Said the Irish, "It's time to be cool, We will stop faction fights in our school: So, we'll now get the hide Of that War Lord outside. After which we will practice Home Rule."

Said the Welsh, "We will fight for King George 'Gainst the Kaiser who raises our gorge; We'll prove we're his betters And weld him strong fetters,

Then the partners all chorussed together .-"We are all of us birds of a feather, An invincible band. United we'll stand, And be British in foul and fair weather.

And we'll make all his robbers disgorge.

Can you reach it?

Is the telephone within reach?

Is it within the reach of each member of your staff?

When you or your assistants want to use the telephone, do you have to walk across the room and perhaps wait until someone who may be using it has finished?

When a customer wants to talk to you or to a member of your staff, can he get you on the minute, or is the "line busy"?

Your answer to these questions will indicate pretty accurately the status of your business.

The cost of an extension telephone figures out at only a few cents a day. You should have one within reach of every man in the office!

If you have a Private Branch Exchange, an additional line to Central will care for business the value of which may outweigh a hundred times the expense of the extra line.

To have inadequate telephone equipment nowadays is to be penny wise and pound foolish-plus!
