BARRIERS BURNED AWAY.

BY THE REV. EDWARD P. ROWE.

CHAPTER XX.

MISS LUDOLPH MAKES A DISCOVERY.

When Dennis opened the front door, there was Ernest cowering in the March winds, and fairly trembling in the flutter of his hopes and fears. Dennis gave him a hearty grasp of the hand and drew in, saying—

'Don't be afraid, I'll take care of you.'

The boy's heart clung to him as the vine tendrils clasps the oak, and upheld by Dennis' strength, he entered what was to him wonder-land indeed.

Mr. Ludolph looked him over as he and his daughter passed out on their return to breakfast, and said—

'He will answer if he is strong enough.' He saw nothing in that child's face to fear.

Dennis assured him with a significant glance, which Mr. Ludolph understood as referring to better fare, that 'he would grow strong fast now.'

Miss Ludolph was at once interested in the boy's pale face and large, spiritual eyes; and she resolved to sketch them before the good living had destroyed the artistic effect.

Under kindly instruction, the boy took readily to his duties, and promised soon to become very helpful. At noon Dennis took him out to lunch, and the poor, half starved lad feasted as he had not for many a long day.

The afternoon mail brought Dennis his mother's letter, and he wondered that her prediction should be fulfilled even before it reached him, and thus again his faith was braced, and his confidence in God increased. He smiled and said to himself,

'Mother lives so near the heavenly land that she seems to get the news thence before any one else.'

During the day a lady who was talking to Mr. Ludolph turned and said to Dennis—

'How prettily you have arranged this table. Let me see; I think I will take that little group of bronzes. They make a very nice effect together.'

Dennis with his heart swelling that he had arrived at the dignity of saleman, did them up quickly and deftly, and handed them to her with much politeness, which evidently pleased the lady.

Mr. Ludolph looked on as if all was a matter of course while she was present, but [illegible] said,

'You are on the right track, Fleet You now see the practical result of a little thought and grace in arrangement. In matters of art, people will pay almost as much for these as for the things themselves. The lady would not have bought those bronzes under Berder's system. When things are grouped rightly, people see just what they want, and buy the effect as well as the articles.'

And with this judicious praise, Mr. Ludolph passed on, better pleased with himself even than Dennis.

But as old Bill Cronk had intimated, such a peck of oats was almost too much for Dennis, and he felt that he was in danger of becoming too highly elated.

After closing the store, he wrote a brief but graphic letter to his mother, describing his promotion, and expressing much sympathy for poor Berder. Regarding himself on the crest wave of prosperity, he felt a strong commiseration for every degree and condition of troubled humanity, and even could sigh over unlucky Berder's deserved tribulations.

About eight o'clock he started to see his new friends in De Kovan street, and take his lesson in painting. They welcomed him warmly, for they evidently looked upon him as the rope that was drawing them out of the engulfing waves to land.

The children were very different from the clamorous little wolves of the night before. No longer hungry, they were happy in the corner, with some rude play things, talking and cooing together like a flock of young birds. Ernest was washing up the tea things, while the mother tended the baby, recalling to Dennis, with a rush of tender memories, his own mother and his boyhood tasks. Mr. Bruder still sat in the dusky corner. The day had been a bitter hard one for him. Having nothing to do in the present, he had lived the miserable past over and over again. At times his strength almost gave way, but his wife would say,

'Be patient! your friend Mr. Fleet will be in soon.'

From a few hints of what had passed, Dennis saw the trouble at once. Mr. Bruder must have occupation. After a few kindly generalities, they two got together, as congenial spirits, before the rescued picture; and soon both were absorbed in the mysteries of the divine art.

As the wife looked at the kindling, interested face of her husband, she murmured to herself over and over again like the sweet refrain of a song—

'His artist soul haf come back; it truly haf.'

The lesson that night could be no more than a talk on general principles and rules. Mr. Bruder soon found that he had an apt scholar, and Dennis' enthusiasm kindled his own flagging zeal, and the artist soul awakening within him as his wife believed, longed to express itself as of old in glowing colors.

Moreover his ambition was renewed in this promising pupil. Naturally generous, and understanding his noble profession, he felt his poor benumbed heart stir and glow at the thought of aiding this eager aspirant to become what he had hoped to be. He might live again in the richer and better guided genius of his scholar.

'I will send you by Ernest in the morning some sketching paper, materials, and canvas, and you can prepare some studies for me. I will let him bring some drawings and colorings that I have made of late in odd moments, and you can see about how advanced I am, and what faults I have fallen into while groping my own way. And I am going to send you some canvas, too, and I am pretty sure that if you paint a picture, Mr. Ludolph will buy it.'

The man's face brightened visibly at this.

'Will you let your friend make a suggestion? continued Dennis.

'You can command me,' said Mr. Bruder with emphasis.

,No; friends never do that; but I would like to suggest that at first you take some litttle simple subject, that you can soon finish up, and leave efforts that require more time for the future. That picture there shows what you can do, and you need to work now more from the commercial standpoint than the artist's.'

After a moment's thought, the man said,

'You are right As I look around dis room, and see our needs, I see dat you are right. Do' I meant to attempt something difficult to show Mr. Ludolph vat I could do.'

'That will all come in good time; and now, my friend, good-night.'

The next day was far more tolerable for poor Bruder, because occupied, and he found it much easier to resist the clamors of appetite.

Dennis's sketches interested him greatly, for though they showed the natural defects of one who had received little instruction, there was both power and originality in their execution.

'He, too, can be an artist, if he vill,' was his emphatic comment after looking them over.'

He prepared one study, to be continued under his own eye, and another for Dennis to work at alone.

Afterwards he sat down to something for himself. He thought a few moments, and then outlined rapidly as his subject, the figure of a man dashing a wine glass to the ground.

As he worked, his wife smiled encouragement to him as of old, and often looked upward in thankfulness to heaven.

CHAPTER XXI.

WHAT IS THE MATTER WITH HIM?

The sun was just tinging the eastern horizon with light when Dennis sprang from his bed on the following morning. He vowad that Miss Ludolph should never have cause to complain of him again; for, great as was the luxury of being awakened by such exquisite music, it was one that he could not afford.

It must be confessed that he gave a little more care than usual that morning to his toilet. But his resources were very limited; still, as nature had done so much for him, he could not complain. But half past six his duties in the store were accomplished, and brushed and furnished up as far as possible, he stood outside the door awaiting his fair task-mistress. Sometimes he wondered at the strange fascination she exercised over him, but generally ended by ascribing it to her beauty and love of art.

A little after the time appointed she appeared with her father, and seemed pleased at Dennis' readiness for work.

'I shall not have to sing you awake this morning,' she said, 'and I am glad, for I am in a mood for business.'

She was attired in a close fitting walk-dress that set off her graceful person finely. It was evident that her energetic nature would permit no statuesque repose while Dennis worked, but that she had come prepared for active measures.

She had inherited a good constitution, which under her father's direction, had been strengthened and confirmed by due regard to hygienic rules. Therefore she had reached the stage of early womanhood abounding in vitality and capable of great endurance. Active, graceful motion was as natural to her, as for a swallow to be on the wing. The moment she dropped her book, pallet, or pencil, she was on her feet, her healthful nature seeming like a mountain brook, that checked for a time in its flow, soon overleaps its bounds and speeds on swifter than ever. But the strange part of this super-abundant activity was, that she never seemed to do anything in an abrupt way, as from mere impulse. Every act glided into another as smoothly and gracefully as the undulations of a serpent. Her lithe willowy figure, neither slight nor stout, was peculiarly adapted to her style of movement. She delighted in the game of billiards, for the quick movements and varied attitudes permitted, and the precision required, were all suited to her taste; and she had gained such marvellous skill that even her father, with his practised hand, was scarcely her match.

As she tripped lightly on before up the long winding stairs to the show room over the front door where their labors were to commence, she appeared to Dennis the very embodiment of grace and beauty. And yet she seemed so cold and self-centered, so devoid of warm human interest in the great world of love, and suffering, that she repelled while she fascinated.

'If the blood should come into the cheeks of one of her father's statues, and the white marble eyes turn to violet blue and the snowly hair to wavy gold, and it should spring from its pedestal into such life, it would be more like her than any woman I ever saw,' thought Dennis as he stood for a moment or two waiting to do her bidding.

Her plans had been pretty thoroughly matured and she acted with decision. Pointing to the side opposite the door at which they had entered, and which would naturally strike the eye of the visitor first, she said, 'I wish all the pictures taken down from that side and placed around the room so that I can see them.'

She commenced as an absolute dictator intending to give no hint of her plans and purposes except as conveyed by clear terse orders. But these had so intelligent and appreciative an interpreter in Dennis that gradually her attention was drawn to him as well as to his work.

He had his step ladder ready, and with a celerity decidedly pleasing, soon placed the pictures safely on the floor, so that she could still see them and judge of their character. Though his quick dextrous manner and careful handling of the pictures were gratifying, it must be confessed that his supple form, the graceful and varied attitudes he unconsciously assumed in his work, pleased her more, and she secretly began to study him as an artistic subject, as he had studied her.

In her complacency she said—

'So far, very well, Mr. Fleet. I congratulate myself that I have you to assist me, instead of that awkward cheat of a Berder.'

'And I assure you, Miss Ludolph, that I have longed intensely for this privilege ever since I knew your purpose.'

'You may have cause to repent, like many another whose wishes have been gratified, for your privilege will involve a great deal of hard work.'

'The more the better,' said Dennis warmly.

'How so? I should think you had more to do now than you would care about.'

'Work is no burden to one of my years and strength, provided it is suited to one's tastes. Moreover, I confess that I hope to derive great advantages from this labor.'

'In what way?' she asked with a slight frown, imagining him thinking of extra pay.

'Because unconsciously you will give me instruction, and I hope that you are not unwilling that I should gain such hints and suggestions as I can from the display of your taste that I must witness.'

'Not at all,' said she laughing, 'I see that you are ambitious to learn your business and rise in the store.'

'I am ambitious to gain a knowledge of one of the noblest callings.'

'What is that?'

'Art.'

'What!' said she with a half-scornful smile, 'are you a disciple of art?'

'Yes; why not?'

'Well I do not wish to hurt your feelings, but to tell you the honest truth, it seems but the other day that you were Pat Murphy.'

'But am I a Pat Murphy?' he asked with gentle dignity.

'No Mr. Fleet. I will do you the justice to say that I think you very much above your station.'

'I am sufficiently a democrat, Miss Ludolph, to believe that a man can be a man in any honest work.'

'And I, Mr. Fleet, am not in the least degree a democrat.'

Which fact she proceeded to prove by ordering him about for the next hour like the most absolute little despot that ever queened it over a servile province in the dark ages. But it was rather difficult to keep up this style of dictatorship with Dennis. He seemed so intelligent and polite that she often had it on her tongue to ask his opinion on certain points. Toward the last she did so, and the opinion he gave, she admitted to herself, was judicious; but for a purpose of her own she disregarded it, and took a different way.

Dennis at once saw through her plan of arrangements. In the centre of that side of the room which he had cleared, she caused him to hang one of the largest and finest pictures, which, under Mr. Schwartz's management had been placed in a corner. Around the central painting all the others were to be grouped, according to color, subject, and merit. At the same time each wall was to have a character of its own. Such a task as this would require no little thought, study and comparison; and Miss Ludolph was one to see delicate points of difference, which most observers would not notice. It was her purpose to make the room bloom out naturally like a great flower. This careful selection of pictures was necessarily slow, and Dennis rejoiced that their mutual work would not soon be over.

To her surprise she often saw his eyes instinctively turning to the same picture that she was about to select, and perceived that he had divined her plan without a word of explanation, and that his taste was constantly according with hers in producing the desired effects. Though all this filled her with astonishment, she revealed no sign of it to him, At eight she said—

'That will do for to-day; we have made a good beginning, better indeed than I had hoped. But how is it, Mr. Fleet, since you are such an uncompromising democrat, you permit a young lady to order you about in this style?'

Dennis smiled and said—

'It seems perfectly natural for you to speak in this way, and it does not appear offensive as it might in another Moreover I have voluntarily taken this position, and am honor-bound to accept all it involves.'

'But which was the controlling motive of your mind?'

'Well, a few seem born to command, and it is a pleasure to obey,' said Dennis, paying a strong but honest compliment to the natural little autocrat.

'Indeed, Mr. Fleet, do church members flatter?' said she, secretly much pleased.

'I did not mean to flatter,' said he flushing. 'They who have power should use it like the All-powerful—gently, considerately.'

It was her turn to flush now, and she said,

'O, I perceive, the compliment was the sugar-coating of the little homily to follow.'

'I have no such diplomacy as you credit me with,' said Dennis, looking straight into her eyes with honest frankness. 'I merely spoke my passing thought.'

'But he has fine eyes,' said she to herself, and then she said to him,

'Very well, I certainly will give you credit for being very different from poor old Pat. Be ready again to-morrow at the same hour,' and with a smile somewhat kindly she vanished.

Somehow to Dennis she seemed to take the light out of the room with her. The picture suddenly looked tame and ordinary, and everything commonplace. Here was an effect not exactly artistic, which he could not understand. He sighed, he scarcely knew why.

But the day's duties came with a rush, and soon he was utterly absorbed in them.

That evening Dennis was much cheered by Mr. Bruder's comments on his sketches.

'Considering de advantages you haf had and de little time you can give, dey are very goot. You haf fallen into de natural faults of dose who work alone, but ve can soon cure dese. Now here some vork on coloring dat I vont you to do under my eye, and dat study on outlining you can take home. Moreover, I can give you some lessons in outlining from my own picture.' And Mr. Bruder showed him what he had done.

Dennis saw in the clear vigorous profile the artist's thought, and congratulated himself that his teacher was a master in his profession.

For two hours they worked and talked, and Dennis felt that every such lesson would be a long step forward.

Poor Bruder looked more and more like himself every day, but God only knew how he had to struggle.

'I don't know how him vill end,' he said. 'I pray nearly every minute, but sometimes I feel dat I must drink even do' I die dat moment,'

It was disease as well as appetite that he was fighting, for appetite indulged beyond a certain point becomes disease.

His wife's face was different also—the sharp look of misery fading out of it. Dennis noticed the changes, and thought to himself while walking home,

'After all, the highest art is the bringing out on the living face all we can of God's lost image. How beautiful the changes in these two poor people's faces, and the best part of it is, that they are the reflex of changes going on in the soul the imperishable part.'

Then in quick and natural transition, his mind reverted to Christine Ludolph, and the thought of her face, which God had fashioned so fairly, but which was already sadly marred by sin, becoming fixed and rigid in pride and selfishness, was as painful as if, according to an old legend, her lithe, active form should gradually turn to stone. But if the reverse could ever be true, if the beautifying Christian graces could dwell within her soul and light up her face, as lamps some rare and quaint transparency, there would then be a loveliness that would realize the artist's fondest ideal.

Musing thus, what wonder that he vowed then and there, under the starlight to pray and work for her till the new life should illumine her heart. Little dreamed Christine as she slept that night, that the first link of a chain that might bind her to heaven, had been forged.

The dawn was late and lowering, the following morning. Great masses of clouds swept across the sky, and soon the rain was falling in gusto torrents. Dennis rose and hastened through his duties as before, and was ready at the hour appointed, but had little hope of seeing Miss Ludolph that morning. Still he opened the door and looked up the street. To his surprise he saw her coming, attended by her father's valet. Only part of her glowing face was visible, for she was encased from head to foot in a light and delicate suit of rubber.

Dennis opened the door, and she stepped quickly in, scattering spray on every side like a sea-nymph. Dennis looked at her with open-eyed admiration and surprise, which both amused and pleased her.

'True enough,' she thought, 'his face is like a sign board.'

She seemed to him as she threw off her wet coverings, like an exquisite flower, that, the breeze lifting after a storm, scatters the burdensome rain drops on every side, and stands up more beautiful and blooming than ever.

'You were not expecting me, I imagine,' she said.

Well I must admit I scarcely did, and yet I could not help looking for you.'

'Isn't that a distinction without a difference?' she asked with a pleasant smile for she was pleased at not finding the store closed and dark.

'I am very glad you have come,' he replied, flushing slightly with pleasure, 'for it would have been a long, dreary morning if you had not.'

Dennis thought he referred to the lack of occupation. He did not know, nor did she notice that he meant the lack of herself.

'Well,' said she, 'I am glad you like the work, for you are destined to enough of it.'

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED

IS A FACT ATTESTED BY THE HIGHEST MEDICAL AUTHORITIES IN THE WORLD.

A careful observance of the laws of health, and the systematic and persistent use of Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda will accomplish this result. This preparation has all the virtues of these two most valuable specifics, in a form perfectly palatable, and acceptable to the most delicate stomach, and we make the unqualified statement that Scott's Emulsion is being used with better results, and endorsed and prescribed by more physicians for Consumption—and the diseases leading to it such as Chronic Coughs, Bronchitis, Scrofula, Anaemia, General Debility and the Wasting Disorders of children, than any other remedy known to medical science. The rapidity with which patients improve on this food medicine diet, is truly marvellous.

SEE WHAT PHYSICIANS AND THE PEOPLE SAY ABOUT IT.

MESSRS. SCOTT & BOWNE: 86 West Thirty-sixth Street, New York, Sept. 2, 1876.

GENTS—I have frequently prescribed "Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites during the past year, and regard it as a valuable preparation in scrofulous and consumptive cases, palatable and efficacious.

C. C. LOCKWOOD, M. D.

MESSRS. SCOTT & BOWNE—Gentlemen—Within the last year I have used in my own family, and in my private practice prescribed very extensively Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites and found it a most valuable preparation, especially in diseases of children. It is agreeable to the most delicate stomach; which renders it a very reliable agent as a nutritive remedy in consumptive and scrofulous cases.

Oct. 12, 1879. Yours respectfully, A. . SAXTON, M. D., Baltimore.

MESSRS. SCOTT & BOWNE—Gentlemen—Within the last two months I have fairly tried Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites, and I candidly declare that it is the finest preparation of the kind that has ever been brought to my notice; in affections of the Lungs and other wasting diseases, we can consider it our most reliable agent, in a perfectly elegant and agreeable form. Very truly, J SIMONAUD, M. D. New Orleans, La.

December 10th, 1878.

MESSRS. SCOTT & BOWNE—Gentlemen—In September 1877, my health began to fail and my physician pronounced it spinal trouble; under his care I got some relief from pain but my general health did not improve, and early in the winter, I began to raise blood and rapidly grew worse. In May last I was taken with a violent bleeding which brought me to my bed and my life was despaired of for many weeks; violent symptoms appeared, night and morning coughs, night sweats, short breath, and a return of the spinal trouble. My physician stopped the bleeding and then ordered Cod Liver Oil and Lime; and I used various preparations, but they did no good. I lost all hope of life, and was an object of pity to all my friends. Last September I purchased a bottle of your EMULSION and before it was all taken I was better. I then bought a dozen bottles and have taken all with the following result: Cough subsiding, night sweats stopped, appetite re urned, pains in spine disappeared, strength returning, and my weight increased from 118 to 140 pounds in sixteen weeks. I have taken no other medicine since commencing with your EMULSION and shall continue its use until I am perfectly well. I frequently meet some friend on the street who asks, what cured you, and I answer SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL, &c. I have a friend who has not spoke aloud for 15 months and he is getting better. I gave him a bottle, and he bought two more then got a dozen and says it is food and medicine for him. He was given up to die a year ago; but he is improving now wonderfully. My recovery is exciting the surprise of many people, and I shall do all I can to make known your valuable medicine.

Jan. 20th 1879. Very truly yours, H. F. SLOCUM, Lowell, Mass.

MESSRS. SCOTT & BOWNE: LYNN, Randolph Co., Ind., July 21, 1878.

About the 15th of last April I got a bottle of your EMULSION and at that time I was so prostrated that no one who saw me thought I could live but a few days at most. I could retain nothing on my stomach and was literally starving. I commenced the use of the EMULSION in small doses; it was the first thing that would stay on my stomach; I continued its use, gradually increasing the dose; and from that hour I commenced mending, and now am able to ride and walk and am gaining flesh and strength rapidly. I have advised other parties to try it, and some two or three have already tried it. I am sure I shall entirely recover. I am gratefully yours,

R. W. HAMILTON M. D.
