

POETRY
I found one of a pleasant time,
A season long ago,
The pleasantest I ever knew,
To ever meet with you.
Bless, bless, my little darling,
So merry and so true,
The year was in its sweet springtime,
And I was in my prime.
I've never heard such music since,
From every bird and tree,
I've never plucked such primroses,
Set thick on bank and lea;
I've never smelt such violets,
As all that pleasant time,
I found by every haithorn root—
When I was in my prime.
You merry down, so black and bare,
Was gorgeous then and gay,
With golden gossamer-blossoms,
As none bloom now a day.
The blackbird sang his solemn now,
Up there in the old lime,
When hours and hours he used to sing—
When I was in my prime.
Such cutting winds came never then,
To pierce one's face and throat;
More gently fell the soft showers,
More balmy the dew,
The mountain mist and evening haze
(Unlike this cold grey rain),
Seemed woven warm of golden air—
When I was in my prime.
