

years at the time he signed articles, they conceived they had no authority to act in reference to him, and he was accordingly discharged. The lad having subsequently gone on board the vessel for his clothes, was promptly apprehended and detained by the captain.— This having come to the knowledge of a sailor's boarding-house keeper, (who indeed seemed most concerned in the affair,) he immediately made an affidavit of the facts, on which a habeas corpus was issued, and the lad and captain under it were brought before Judge Bliss. His Honor after hearing counsel on both sides, and on full investigation into the law and facts, decided that he had authority to take cognizance of, and if necessary coerce the proceedings of the inferior court, and that the lad although a minor, was bound by his contract which he had entered into when he had signed articles, and which was clearly a beneficial one. He was therefore ordered to return immediately to his duty on-board his ship. This will correct an erroneous opinion which has prevailed for some time at the police court, and which has caused no little inconvenience to captains of vessels arriving at this port.— Col.

The latest telegraphic despatch from New York, is to the 12th inst. four days later news than by the R. M. S. Niagara, at this port. The substance contained in a few lines, is nevertheless important. First it is stated—"No battle of importance has been fought since previous advices." There is a more than ordinary significance in this, when great events are daily expected. Next we have, "The fleet has withdrawn from Cronstadt," an announcement as ominous as though Nelson had backed off from Copenhagen after having disregarded the recall signal of Sir Hyde Parker. No one will believe that Sir Charles Napier has retreated from his post of difficulty and honour, without the most peremptory orders, after approaching within twenty miles of his object with thirty sail of the British fleet, and cannonading the forts on the western end of Cronstadt isle, as stated in the news by the Niagara. The Earl of Dundonald, who offered to accept the command in the Baltic, and "destroy" the Russians, may probably have saved his world-wide reputation by thus proving that he was really in earnest in his view of the undertaking. Another "click, click" of the invisible messenger, and we find that "Prussia is forcing Austria into new negotiations. Strong suspicions are being entertained regarding the good faith and sincerity of Austria." "Prussia" may be a misprint. It does not however alter the position which that power will occupy in the game of Turkish spoliation. The Austrian occupation of the Principalities can only be the foist of a real friend of Russia, determined to share with her, and a deceptive one of the allies. England and France have naval and military possession of Turkey, which exists as an independent power only so long as their good faith continues; and while Russia and Austria, are close upon her territory, in hostile attitude, must retain their position, and may be obliged to make it a permanent occupation. Austria has been permitted to enter the disputed territory, and is well pleased to obtain a possession on such easy terms, and will make the most of it. It behoves Prussia, therefore, to ply her utmost energies, if she really expects to profit by the not improbable dividend. Nay, if it happen, and she do not profit, her own condition will be deplorable, and she may prepare herself to descend to a fourth or fifth rate estate among the continental nations, and for absorption at last War makes strange complications, and no power entering upon it, however just may be the cause, can be certain of maintaining it with justice to the end. We shall be able in a short time to observe more clearly the tendency of all these complications. The result is only known to the God of Hosts, who pulleth down and raiseth up and ordereth the kingdoms of the earth according to His will.
