

NEW PUBLICATION.

The Bench and Bar Review, January, 1864.

We acknowledge the receipt of the first number of this interesting and most useful Review, edited by Atkinson Schaumburg Baltimore. We quote from the prospectus: "The Bench and Bar Review is a periodical devoted exclusively to the wants of the legal profession. A leading feature is, essays upon legal topics, written by eminent law writers and members of the Bar of the United States and England. The subjects treated of will embrace topics of law and equity in all their branches: Common, Commercial and Mercantile, International and Constitutional, Criminal, Bankrupt and Admiralty, Patent and Civil Law, Pleading, Practice, Evidence, &c., containing the latest researches upon these points. An important feature will be the most recent decisions of the various courts—to which considerable space will be allotted—of the Districts, Circuit and Supreme Courts of the U. S.; of the Courts of Appeal of the Several States and of the Courts of common Pleas, Queen's Bench, Exchequer and House of Lords in England, Scotch and Irish Courts; together with the decisions of such inferior Courts as may be of interest or importance to the profession."

Each number will contain a finely executed portrait of some distinguished Jurist or Lawyer, with a critical of his life, character, works, &c.
