Reduced to averages, the H., G. & B. charges about 12-5 cents per mile. The Metropolitan charges over 2½ cents per mile.

Liberal, we reprint what The Newmarket Era says:

As an outcome of the Yonge-street and C.P.R. crossing trouble, it is a source of supreme satisfaction to learn that ere another session of the Assembly is brought to a close this Province will have the benefit of legislation governing all trolley foads. That the fares are too high is demonstrated by the action of the H., G. & B. line out of Hamilton. When the present maximum rate was agreed to by the County Council the members were assured that, if it was found to be excessive, and the line was sustained by reasonable traffic, the rates would be very materially reduced—probably to a cent per mile; but, while the traffic exceeds the expectations of the promoters of the line, we are paying rates, considering the difference in personal convenience, almost as high as now obtain on the G.T.R. The Toronto World has put the comparison between the H., G. & B. road and the Metropolitan in a concise form, and to which we direct the attention not only of the trolley company and the general public, but also of the Ontario Government, and especially the Local members for the three ridings of this county.

The member for North York was in the County Council when the Metropolitan was securing enlargement of its powers and privileges, and he will, no doubt, remember the assurances given by those representing the company.

What the people of the county now desire is that at least a part of those assurances shall be incorporated in the proposed legislation governing trolley lines. We need not stop to repeat these assurances at present, but will give the comparisons relating to rates, which we take from our city contemporary:

The rate to York Mills on the Metropolitan is seven cents. The tariff for a great deal to lose by giving a United States syndicate elevator privileges in the port of Montreal. If the St. Lawrence oute is the most economic one for the onveyance of grain to the seaboard and to is, nothing which any American syndicate may or may not do can prevent it from attracting the business to which its advantages entitle it. The success of the St. Lawrence route, with its enlarged canals, does not depend upon an American syndi-cate in any shape or form. The St. Lawrence route stands upon its own merits.

If it enjoys an advantage over all other outes, it will get the business whether the Conners syndicate build elevators at Montreal or not. That is the first great fact we should bear in mind when dealing with the proposition of the Buffalo syndi-Their co-operation is not essential success of the route. It is just posthem exceptional privileges may be used the detriment rather than to the advantage of the Canadian route. The safer ment and the free use of our great national waterway. The integrity of the system ought to be preserved absolutely. Besides, it is not very flattering to the country to have an American company come in just when we have finished this great work and take possession of it and show us how to make it go. We do not believe in the idea of American. We do not believe in the idea of American. We have constituted the quantity shipped in 1898. But it is not one-fourth the quantity that double the quantity shipped in 1898. But it is not one-fourth the quantity that it is not one-fourth the growth of this in were procurable. The growth of this in gavel for order at the North Toronto Liberti could storage in connection with the railing was somewhat of an innovation in ways political, inasmuch as it took the form of a high-class concert interpolated

The way to play upon the harp, as the old Greek said, was to play upon the harp, and the way to regulate rallways is to regulate them, and to take each one up as the opportunity offers. Listen to this from the opportunity offers. Listen to this from in the year. The shipping season would be much longer if the birds were procur-

the opportunity offers. Listen to this from The Liberal:

The World of Monday again maintains that the Metropolitan Company should be compelled by the Legislature to carry passengers at a cent a mile, and that journal calls upon The Liberal to urge the Local members to move in that direction. We would certainly like to see lower rates, but as long as competing lines of steam railways are allowed by law to charge three cents a mile, we cannot see that it would be justice to take the Metropolitan by the throat and say, "You must carry passengers at just one-third the rate charged by your competitors." If all lines are lowered to two or one cent a mile, as the case may be, the Metropolitan will not have the same reason to complain of partiality.

The World still harps on the Metropolitan getting right-of-way to the Union Station and the St. Lawrence Market, and speaks as if people up this way are opposed to such a proposal. Not at all. We endeavored for years to get the right-of-way, but the city and Toronto Street Railway would never consent. We are all anxious to get to the heart of the city without change of cars, but places situated as Richmond Hill is also desire connection with a railway such as the C.P.R., so that coal and other fre ght may be brought to the people's doors.

That is, that the Metropolitan Railway, Specking through The Liberal. says it must may be brought to the people's doors.

That is, that the Metropolitan Rallway, speaking through The Liberal, says it must not have its passenger rates regulated until also regulated. This we take to be mere Editor World: I notice in the papers that the Toronto Collegiate Institute Board has advertised for a teacher of Latin and science in their Jarvis-street Institute. This calls for some explanation. What is meant by "Latin" is clear enough, but "science" has a very ambiggous meaning. Some time ago a teacher was required in Harbord-street Institute to teach geography and history. To teach these subjects Principal Spotton wanted a science man, and the Board accordingly advertised for one. A teacher was engaged, but, instead of giving him the sciences of geography and history to teach, Principal Spotton gave him the sciences of arithmetic and Euclid. This is the meaning of "science" when the Board and Mr. Spotton were in company. I am inclined to think it has a different meaning in connection with the Jarvis street advertisement, and it would be well for intending applicants to make certa'n.
