Rev. Father Osborne of Boston gave a thrilling lecture last night on South Africa.

The Church of England in South Africa has now, he stated, 11 bishops, 300 clergy and 70,000 communicants.

The missionary clergy, holding the same views as Father Osborne on the confession and penance, have the native Christians confess regularly, and in cases of serious lapses from consistent conduct the penitents are required to make public confession and are placed on probation before being granted full church privileges.

The great difficulty among the natives, when first approached by the missionaries, was that they had no clothes, no written language, and no religion, except a species of spiritualism, which enables medicine men to prey upon their credulity.

The orator declared, ranging from tyrants in cities who consider the black man as worthy of little regard to others, who are content to live like rabbits in holes in the ground, with a slight wooden roof and low door to creep in at.

The war in South Africa is essentially the part of the British, for the cause of freedom. So utterly devoid of respect are the Boers of the rights of the colored races that when a company of British soldiers was at Johannesburg two of them were refused the privilege of being married.
