Privy Council Upholds Canadian Decisions in Prolonged Copyright Dispute.

The celebrated copyright case over he well-known picture. The celebrated copyright case over the well-known picture representing a bull-dog seated on a Union Jack, with the inscription beneath, "What we have we'll hold," has been decided in favor of the Toronto publisher, George T. Gorie of Adelaide-street. Reproductions the costs.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Dominion Exhibition yesterday afternoon it was decided that six tickets should be sold for $1, transferable if not detached from the cost of the Toronto publisher, George T. Gorie of Adelaide-street. Reproductions thorized, and the case was dismissed with costs. of the picture have been sold freely with costs. thruout this country and Henry Graves Son of London, holders of the Britthe late Mr. Justice Rose, who, dismissed it, and his disposition of the matter than the control of the matter than the control of the matter than the matter than the matter than the late of the late Mr. Justice Rose, who, dismissed it, and his disposition of the matter than the matter than the late of the late Mr. Justice Rose, who, dismissed it, and his disposition of the matter than the matter than the late of the late tried at Woodstock at the last sittings. The plaintiff, while under the age of twenty-one years, joined with her husband in a deed of their farm to her stepson in order to bar her dower. The boy had been promised the farm in consideration of his remaining at home and working with his father, and the court held that this was sufficient to render him a purchaser for value. The wife sought to recover her dower in the farm, which is valued at $3200, on the ground that she was an infant in law, and not capable of making a conveyance. The deed was made in 1895, and, since the Married Women's Real Estate Act, which came into force on May 5, 1894, provides that a married woman under age may bar her dower in such a case, the Chief Justice dismissed Mrs. Crossett's action, Trustee Properly Appointed.

The will of Richard T. Bradley of Sarnia provided that, in case of the arnia provided that, in case of the eath of either of the trustees named y him, his surviving brothers and isters might nominate his successor. In the death of Edward Bradley, in 1899, the surviving relatives named one Saunders to succeed him, and Chief Justice Meredith has decided that such tion was properly taken. As all the arties were not in court, however, e argument over the interpretation of will stands over for further hear-to the club and granted the relief asked for. The railway company have a reservoir from which they pump water for the village, and their own use, and the pumping station of the plaintiffs is farther down the stream. They alleged that they require 6000 gallons a day for their own use, and the Grand Trunk must allow that quantity at least to flow to the club's pumps.

Morang Company, to eccover certain papers, documents and material for the publication of their "Annual Register of Canadian Affairs" from J. Castell Hopkins, was dismissed with costs yesterday by Mr Justice Teetzel. Mr. Hopkins was engaged by the publishing company from January, 1901, to June 27, 1902, at $25 per week, and edited. The Register for the first year, but, on leaving their employ, removed all of his papers and what material he had collected for the 1902 edition. The court held that, as the company had implied that the publication of the work would be discontinued, Mr. Hopkins was at liberty to use the material for his own benefit.

Golf Club Must Have Water.

The Fernhill Land Company and the Toronto Golf Club renewed their motion yesterday for a perpetual injunction restraining the Grand Trunk Railway Company from diverting the water from a stream flowing thru the club's grounds. Counsel for the railway objected that they were under contract to supply water to East Toronto, but the club and granted the relief asked to the detail and paramed the relief asked to the club and granted the reliation of the publication of the work would be discontinued.
