Pursuit Made Difficult

The Associated Press corresponden with the troops encountered some of the difficulties which confront pursuing army. At five different places aroused by the spectacle of the ravages the left extremity of the German line the French tried to cross the canal, committed by the Germans everywhere at St. Gobian to the risk of being outsuddenly by a yawning opening where a bridge had been blown up, but eventually crossed by a pontoon.

As the French progress continues, he extent to which the countryside has been laid waste develops; not a dwelling remains intact. This is not the result of artillery fire, but specially-prepared bombs, which were placed in the buildings as the Germans left. Cottages and farmhouses, which once housed nearly 100,000 peasant farmers, have thus been rea-IS ON UNSOUND BASIS ered uninhabitable, merely in these districts which the Germans recently have been forced to evacuate
