of the enemy about Huiluch, Richebourg, Pilkem, Monchy and Freingnien. The Germans sprung a mine near the Comines Canal, causing some damage to the British trenches, but the British occupied the crater. Mining activity is reported at other sections of the front.

The French lost part of their front west of the road between Arras and Lens, in the Neuville St. Vaast region, as a result of the explosion of mines and an artillery bombardment by the Germans, but they regained most of the position. At first the Germans penetrated the first line of the French here on a front of several hundred yards, as far as the supporting trench. Counter-attacks broke down the effort of the enemy. By the afternoon he occupied about 200 yards of rrench positions, forming a salient.

German field works were considerably damaged by French bombardments of the Cholera farm, between Solssons and Rheims, of the region of Nieuport, in Belgium, and of the region of Maisons de Champagne.

One Object:

Prohibition

The Committee of One Hundred declines to be drawn into the discussion of party politics. Its work has nothing to do with such matters. The only issue it faces and the only question upon which it has any opinion is Prohibition. It neither attacks nor defends the Government or the Op-position. It stands for Prohibition and for nothing else. Its allies and friends are those who at the present time believe in Provincial Prohibition. The Committee is well aware that the friends of the liquor traffic are seeking, and will seek, to divide the friends of temperance by raising partisan questions. But the people of On-tario are too intelligent to be fooled, and they have their eyes on one goal. They propose to drive the drink evil out of Ontario.
