Fables On Health

KEEP A MEDICINE CABINET

TIME was when every mother kept a well-supplied medicine cabinet, and was able to administer first-aid in case of almost every kind of minor injury or ailment. In addition she gathered roots and herbs from the woods, or cultivated plants of curative properties in her yard or garden. Doctors were fewer in those days. They often lived at a great distance, and with no telephones nor automobiles it was difficult to obtain a doctor on sabbath notice. Times have changed. There are more physicians, and they are more efficient. Corner drug stores have sprung up in nearly every locality. So mothers are learning to depend upon the drug store and the doctors, even as they are learning to depend upon the delicatessen stores and the grocery stores for their meals. Some good has been brought about by the change, of course. But one is prompted to ask if the drift has not gone too far.

LITTLE JOE

TRUE, THE WIFE MAY HAVE THE LAST WORD — BUT HOW LONG DOES IT LAST —

No mother should be ignorant of simple remedies for minor injuries to her children. It should not be necessary to run to the drug store or call the doctor every time Johnny cuts his finger or "stumps" his toe. The medicine cabinet should be restocked in the home. And the mother should know how and when to use its contents. But—and this is important—be sure that all vials containing poison are correctly labeled, and that they are kept away from the children.

Adventures of the Twins

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON.

THE POT OF GOLD.

"Do you believe in fairies, Mi O' Mi?" asked Nick, when the Story Teller had finished his tale of "Guido and the Magic Pen."

Mi O' Mi looked surprised. "Believe in fairies?" he exclaimed. "Why, certainly I do. I should not like to be one of those people who go through life not believing in fairies. If we don't believe in fairies we get after awhile that we don't believe in anything that we do not see. We get to be regular Doubting Thomases. It is much better to believe in too many things than in not enough things. That is—of course—provided they are the right things. It is silly to believe in signs and dreams, of course, but—"

Suddenly Mi O' Mi began to laugh. "Why, just when I was talking about not believing in dreams, a story popped into my head, about a dream," said Mi O' Mi. "After all this man did believe in his dream, and it came true, but it was only what you call a coincidence. It was funny anyway." "Tell it to us, please, won't you?" asked Nick. "Certainly," said Mi O' Mi. "It is about a poor simple fellow who dreamed that he was to find a pot of gold. For two days he stood wearily at one end of the bridge and nothing happened except that he was nearly run over. "At last a fellow townsmen drove by in his cart. "Hello, Gander," he called. "Still here? And no gold yet? Why, last night I dreamed that there was a pot of gold buried in your backyard at home, but I didn't even look." "Gander thought carefully for a few minutes. Then he trudged back home and started to dig up his back yard. And there under a gooseberry bush he found an old box with a thousand golden crowns." "What happened then?" asked Nick. "No one ever laughed at Gander after that, and they let him alone," said Mi O' Mi. "But it goes to show that it is better to believe in everything than in nothing. And, as for fairies, I hope that I shall never stop believing in them. Or you either?"

DOES EVERY MEAL CAUSE YOU DISTRESS? IF IT DOES YOU SHOULD TAKE BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

Mr. M. P. Eldridge, Beaver Harbor, N. B., writes: "I was troubled with my stomach for some time, and everything I ate seemed to distress me. I tried many different medicines, but without any results. Finally I was advised to try B. B. B., and after having taken several bottles I was completely relieved of my trouble. I can now eat anything I wish, thanks to B. B. B."

Burdock Blood Bitters puts the stomach into perfect shape by promoting proper digestion; and during the past 46 years it has been on the market has made a reputation, second to none, for relieving all stomach troubles.

FANCY SLEEVES NEW

The bottoms of the new sleeves are very often embroidered or trimmed with circular ruffles.

SILHOUETTE IS NARROW

Many of the new coat dresses have belts in the back but the fronts are straight and the fullness kept in place by means of pleats.

Beats 'Em All.

Experience is the one perpetual best seller—everybody is continually buying it.

Embroidery In Bright Colors

THE lines to this gown of white georgette crepe are simple enough, but the wide band of wool embroidery in bright colors and the fringed hemline make it very striking and unusual. A scarf of black illusion makes the oriental looking turban, one end of which is wound about the throat and falls over the shoulder.

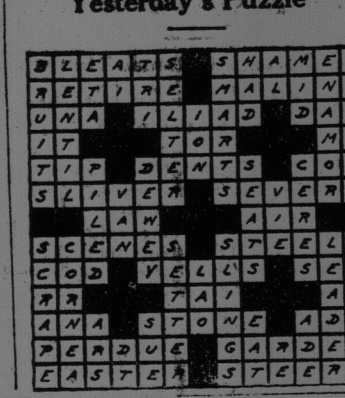

Mother's Method.

"Every time I take castor-oil mother puts two pence in my money box!" "And when your money-box is full?" "She buys a new bottle of castor-oil!" —Pete Mele, Paris.

Youthful Gander.

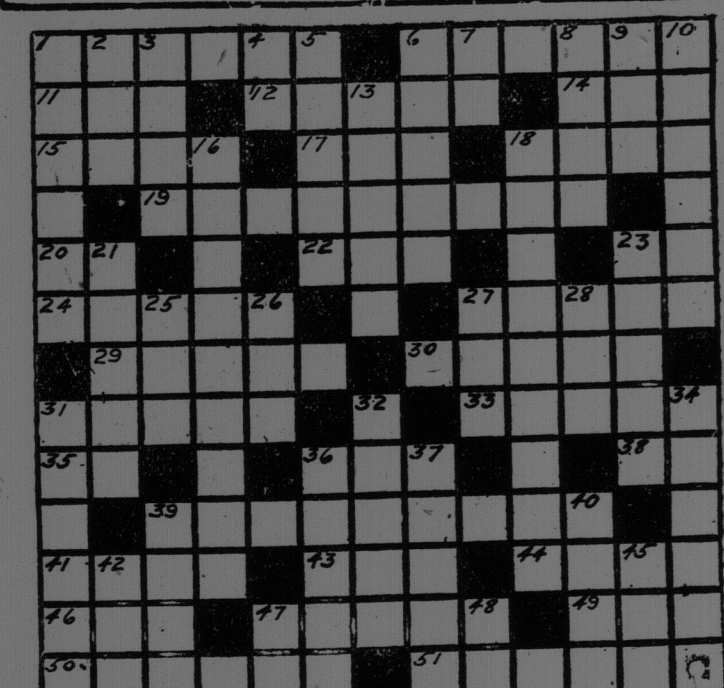

Candid letter from a twelve-year-old girl acknowledging a present: "Dear Aunt Harriet—Thank you for your gift. I have always wanted a pin-cushion, but not very much."
