Chicago seems to be a sort of training-school for evangelists. It gave Moody and Sankey their dis-cipline as preachers, and they have turped the heads if not the hearts of a quarter of England. It has trained another evangelist, who is attracting crowds in London and bids fair to make a deeper if not wider impression than Mr. Moody. This Mr. Cole is under the direction of Mr. J. V. Farwell, who seems to be a sort of professor at-large of pulpit eloquence, for he did more than any one else to develop Mr. Moody.—but for his generoaity Mr. Moody's family would many times have suffered at for want of food.
