

IRISH DYNAMITERS

A Spy Tells Some of the Secrets of the Irish-American Societies.

Ivory, Tynan and Other Recent Conspirators Were Among the Members.

Important Evidence Brought Out at the Trial of Ivory This Morning.

London, Nov. 13.—During the examination today in the Bow street police court of Edward J. Ivory, alias Edward J. Bell, the Irish-American saloon-keeper of New York, the alleged dynamiter, there was an exciting feature for the first time in the dreary proceedings against the prisoner. A witness who gave the name of Jones was examined. When he appeared in the box Ivory's face showed consternation. Jones, it is understood, has for years been identified with the Clan-na-Gael and other Irish-American organizations. The prosecution expected Jones to unravel the secret of the story of the physical force movement. Replying to the questions of C. F. Gill, who prosecuted for the treasury department, Jones said he was a native of Armagh. He was employed by the British government to make enquiries in 1881. He entered the employ of a wholesale grocery firm in New York and remained with them until 1895, when he opened a business of his own. Jones remained in New York until November of the present year. At this time he was apparently making inquiries for the British government. He said early in 1892 he met William Lyman, president of the Irish National Alliance, and Roland in New York and learned of the existence of the Irish National organization, known among its members as the "United Irish" or "T. H." whose executive body was known by the letters "D.A."

Continuing Jones said that on instructions he joined the organization and was initiated into a camp known as the Shamrock Club, among those present being Lyman, Bolan, Gallagher, Kearney and Tynan. They afterwards formed a new camp, which was called the Nally. The membership of which included Means and Nolan, who had been connected with an explosion at Dublin. Jones further stated that he was elected treasurer of the Nally Club, whose meetings it appeared "district orders" being burned after being read and after initiation members were known by numbers. Part of the subscriptions witness testified were contributed to the revolutionary cause and calls were made for money to pay for the celebration of the deaths of the Manchester martyrs and to aid convicted dynamiters. Jones said that while on the way to the Chicago convention in 1895, Kearney introduced the prisoner and called him "Ivory."

Tynan and O'Donovan Rossa were present and Tynan said Ivory belonged to his camp and had been known to him in Dublin before 1882. Jones mentioned the Chicago convention of 1895 and referred to the "New Movement Convention," which was attended by a number of confidants of Lyman, who during the convention, it was stated in court, held a secret meeting with them. Later, it seems, Jones where the committee on secret organization met. Ivory, Jones stated, attended the meeting at which names were chosen to be submitted to a public convention as officers of the "New Movement," the object being so to mislead the government as to be controlled as it is, according to Jones, by the secret organization.

In another portion of his testimony Jones said that he saw Ivory in Cody's saloon, New York, which was largely frequented by members of the organization, two or three weeks before Ivory left America. Jones then produced a document purporting to give the constitution of the society in 1895, also type copies of the constitution and the ritual of the Clan-na-Gael. Jones said any one convicted of a dynamite outrage was described in the proceedings of the organization as "A Soldier of Ireland."

Witness produced a mass of documents giving "camp" instructions, pass words, signs, etc. At the close of the proceedings Ivory was formally committed for trial.

The afternoon newspapers make great pretence of the evidence furnished by Jones and have seen the heads, reading "Le Caron the Second," "Secrets of the Clan-na-Gael," "Startling Disclosures by an Irish Spy," etc. When Jones first appeared on the witness stand Mr. Gill all sketching in court, explaining that it was of the utmost importance that nothing be allowed to transpire to identify the witness in future. Mr. Carter was in court to-day as a representative of the United States embassy. Jones caused a sensation during the court proceedings by suddenly addressing the magistrate, saying "a reporter is taking a sketch of me. I fear for my safety."

Magistrate Vaughan ordered the reporter to desist. A prison attendant soon afterwards said to the magistrate: "A reporter is writing a description of Jones." The magistrate thereupon sternly remarked: "I will not allow even a written description of the witness to be made." Chief Inspector Melville of Scotland Yard took an active part in London, Nov. 14.—An enormous concourse, including the Duke of Teck and Princess Edward and Herman of Saxe-Weimar, witnessed the start to-day from the Hotel Metropole of about sixty motor cars and cycles, under the auspices of the Motor Car Club in the inaugural journey from London to Brighton, this being the date when the new highway act comes into force. The start was preceded by breakfast at the Metropole, after which the chairman, the Earl of Winchilsea, amid loud cheers, tore up the red flag which according to law it has hitherto been necessary to carry in front of road motors. The first motor which reached Three Bridges knocked down a little girl and seriously injured her.

London, Nov. 13.—When Ivory's counsel asked Jones to give the initials of his name the witness refused, but the counsel insisted and also demanded to know the address of Jones in New York, whereupon the witness replied: "I fear for my safety and decline to give the particular location." The magistrate upheld Jones in his refusal, and then followed a dramatic incident. Counsel for the prisoner suddenly asked, "Did you take the oath of the Clan Na Gael?" Upon hearing this question Jones turned lividly pale, hesitated for a moment and then feebly answered "Yes." Ivory's counsel thereupon said, "You were in London at the time not to observe it? To this question Jones replied, "Yes, I did not intend to observe it." Counsel thereupon said, "Have you any respect for the oath you have given here to-day?" "Yes," replied Jones in a weak voice.

EMPEROR WILLIAM

Delivers an Oration at the Swearing in of Recruits.

London, Nov. 13.—The Times' Berlin dispatch says: "The ceremony of swearing in recruits for the garrisons of Berlin, Spandau, Charlott-nburg and Gross-Lichtenfelde, this afternoon took place in front of the royal palace. The Emperor William delivered an oration, in the course of which he said: 'You have just taken an oath upon the crucifix and the standard to me, your war lord and to the fatherland. Just as the crown is naught without the altar and the crucifix, so the army is nothing without the Christian religion. You are called as soldiers in my keeping to serve me in single-minded allegiance. Ever remember that you have received your weapons to protect the crown. In view of the general mistrust now prevailing it is especially your duty, by obedience, always to set a good example. You are entering the army in the year we celebrate the centenary of the birth of the great Emperor William. Never forget what he accomplished. We are duty bound to maintain what he created. His eye rests upon the whole army. God grant that at the call of heaven we may appear worthily before him.'

The Daily Mail's Berlin dispatch says: The following words, held to indicate his personal feelings on the recent Bruswitz incident at Carlsbad, occurred in Emperor William's speech. "Hold your uniform in honor. The man who insults your coat insults your king; who assaults your king's coat assaults your chief war lord."

The Bruswitz incident, it will be remembered, was that a German army officer who ran through the body of a working man who had inadvertently brushed against him in a cafe, and who declined to apologize on the ground that no insult was intended.

BY-LAW AND REGULATIONS

Point Ellice Bridge Again Considered By City Council.

A short session of the city council was held last evening, all the members with the exception of Aldermen Humphrey and Marchant being present. The council resolved itself into a committee of the whole to further consider the by-law to raise a sum of money for the purpose of building a permanent bridge at Point Ellice. The council had previously resolved to make the debentures payable in twenty-five years, but the mayor pointed out that it would require $5,000 the first year to meet interest and sinking fund, a considerable sum to come out of the general revenue. If the debentures were for 49 years, the cost would be about $5,800 for the first year, so the council decided on 49 years. All the remaining sections and proposals of the by-law were passed but little discussion and the committee rose and reported the by-law complete with amendments.

The report was adopted and the council adjourned on Saturday, the 28th day of November, as the day on which the by-law will be submitted to the people. The places for polling are the same as those for municipal elections. W. K. Ball was named as returning officer.

The council again resolved itself into a committee of the whole, to consider the regulations for the tramway traffic across the pile bridge at Point Ellice. No car, weighing with its passengers, more than 5 1/2 tons will be allowed to cross, the speed will be more than four miles an hour and cars crossing the bridge must not be less than 200 feet apart. Each car must be supplied with a gong, which must be rung as the car approaches the bridge. When teams are on the truss cars must stop until they pass, and when cars are on the truss, teams must stop until the car passes.

Further regulations, fixing penalties for non-compliance were passed and the committee rose and reported the regulations complete with amendments. The council adjourned at nine o'clock.

SEATTLE LAND SWINDLE

Poles Induced to Leave Their Homes in Texas.

Seattle, Wn., Nov. 13.—What looks like the greatest land swindle ever perpetrated in Washington came to light yesterday.

Fifteen men, five of them with their families, have come to Seattle from Bremond, Texas, to take up homesteads which Mr. Makowski, manager of the so-called "Washington Farming Land Company," said awaited them here. These people have found that the land company is a fake and that Makowski has vanished. He secured $600 from the party and their friends, yet expecting to come to live on the homesteads reserved to them. The families here have sold all their possessions in Texas to get money to pay their expenses on reaching Seattle, about $1,000 being paid out in railroad fare. Four of them started back to Texas to-night, and another lot will leave to-morrow.

Makowski would put an ad in a local paper that circulated in Texas. The office of the company was given as 227 Poplar street, Seattle. There is no such company here. The advertisement said the company had a large tract of land, and that if any person desired to take up a homestead the company would locate him, for $10, to be paid in advance. In a letter to an intending emigrant Makowski paints a beautiful picture of the country, and could be secured for $10, and about $150 more to buy a horse and get your farm in condition." He told him work at good wages could be had any time, and advised that the recipient of the letter tell all his friends and get them to come.

From the story told by Chief of Police Reid to-night by some of the victims, Makowski has operated his $10 certificate scheme extensively in Texas and Illinois, and must have cleaned up hundreds of dollars, as the police have learned that he has been receiving money orders galore.

SATOLLI'S REPORT

On the Actions of Bishop Keane Late of the Catholic Episcopate.

London, Nov. 13.—Cardinal Satolli has presented to the Pope his report on religious factions in the United States. Although this document is destined not to be published, it is nevertheless perfectly well known what it contains. Cardinal Satolli makes a veritable accusation against Bishop Keane and the Catholic University of the United States at Washington. He accuses Bishop Keane of having a several public speeches uttered opinions which bordered on heresy, and says that to accord with Archbishop Ireland he endeavored to accommodate a neoatholism (New Catholicism) on American soil. Cardinal Satolli says the university at Washington had become the place where the most bold and risky theories were put forward. Fortunately, he says, the removal of Bishop Keane has cut short the evil at its root, but the bishop left behind dangerous associates in the persons of numerous professors of this unwise, and the Cardinal advises the Pope to deprive them of their offices.

The officials say that beyond newspaper rumors they have no knowledge of any difficulty between the United States and Spain.

Continuing Jones said that on instructions he joined the organization and was initiated into a camp known as the Shamrock Club, among those present being Lyman, Bolan, Gallagher, Kearney and Tynan. They afterwards formed a new camp, which was called the Nally. The membership of which included Means and Nolan, who had been connected with an explosion at Dublin. Jones further stated that he was elected treasurer of the Nally Club, whose meetings it appeared "district orders" being burned after being read and after initiation members were known by numbers. Part of the subscriptions witness testified were contributed to the revolutionary cause and calls were made for money to pay for the celebration of the deaths of the Manchester martyrs and to aid convicted dynamiters. Jones said that while on the way to the Chicago convention in 1895, Kearney introduced the prisoner and called him "Ivory." Tynan and O'Donovan Rossa were present and Tynan said Ivory belonged to his camp and had been known to him in Dublin before 1882. Jones mentioned the Chicago convention of 1895 and referred to the "New Movement Convention," which was attended by a number of confidants of Lyman, who during the convention, it was stated in court, held a secret meeting with them. Later, it seems, Jones where the committee on secret organization met. Ivory, Jones stated, attended the meeting at which names were chosen to be submitted to a public convention as officers of the "New Movement," the object being so to mislead the government as to be controlled as it is, according to Jones, by the secret organization. In another portion of his testimony Jones said that he saw Ivory in Cody's saloon, New York, which was largely frequented by members of the organization, two or three weeks before Ivory left America. Jones then produced a document purporting to give the constitution of the society in 1895, also type copies of the constitution and the ritual of the Clan-na-Gael. Jones said any one convicted of a dynamite outrage was described in the proceedings of the organization as "A Soldier of Ireland." Witness produced a mass of documents giving "camp" instructions, pass words, signs, etc. At the close of the proceedings Ivory was formally committed for trial. The afternoon newspapers make great pretence of the evidence furnished by Jones and have seen the heads, reading "Le Caron the Second," "Secrets of the Clan-na-Gael," "Startling Disclosures by an Irish Spy," etc. When Jones first appeared on the witness stand Mr. Gill all sketching in court, explaining that it was of the utmost importance that nothing be allowed to transpire to identify the witness in future. Mr. Carter was in court to-day as a representative of the United States embassy. Jones caused a sensation during the court proceedings by suddenly addressing the magistrate, saying "a reporter is taking a sketch of me. I fear for my safety." Magistrate Vaughan ordered the reporter to desist. A prison attendant soon afterwards said to the magistrate: "A reporter is writing a description of Jones." The magistrate thereupon sternly remarked: "I will not allow even a written description of the witness to be made." Chief Inspector Melville of Scotland Yard took an active part in
